LONDON: Printed by H. WOODFALL; And fold by A. DODD, at the Peacock, without Temple-Bar, M.DCC.XXXV. (Price Two Shillings.) I) F7420

T is impossible to view the immensity, the variety, the harmony, and the beauty of the Universe, without concluding it to be the workmanship of a Being infinitely powerful, wife, and good.

IT is impoffible to examine the ftructure of the moft inconfiderable plant or animal, without being furpriz'd with fuch admirable contrivance, as pronounces the author infinitely. intelligent, and excludes all fuspicion, that it ow'd its origin to blind chance.

THE vegetable world is adjusted with fuch amazing skill, that each plant, perfect in its own kind, is fupported, and propagated, mechanically, by the unerring action of the fun, the air, and the earth where it grows; its feeds, by that mechanism, produce new plants of the fame kind; and the herb, that perishes with the feafon, cloaths the fields with the fame livery against the next: that brute matter, inert, and infenfible, fhould be framed fo as to perform fuch wonders, fhews wifdom, and power, far beyond the comprehenfion of the most perfect man.

THE action of the material powers in this fystem upon the organized body of a plant preferves, and propagates it; its roots fhoot out into the foil where it grows, there it finds abundant aliment for perfecting its trunk, and preparing its feeds, and those feeds are dropped where they meet the like encouragement. but it is not fo with animals; the most perfect of the kind, left to the direction of material and mechanical powers only, muft perifh without rearing any fucceffion.

VEGETABLE's and animals are fo far fimilar, that both require conftant supplies of fresh juices; but in this they differ, that nature mechanically reaches to the one the fupply it wants, whereas the other must, by some act of its own, find and fetch it; and therefore in in animals, befides matter and mechanifin there is an active principle; fomewhat, of which we have no conception or knowledge but by its effects, that finds, prepares, and takes in proper nourifhment, and determines to the propagation, and prefervation of its own fpecies.

By what fort of mechanism this principle acts on, or is affected by, the meer matter to which it is join'd, we cannot at all conceive; but this we see, that it calls all the brute animal creation to those acts that are necessary for self-preservation, and propagating the species; each class of animals is highly industrious to compass these ends; and, if we may judge by what we feel transacting in the brute part of ourselves, there is in them a strong defire to do those acts that are necessary for the support of themselves, and a very sensible pleasure attending the gratification of that defire.

I T does not appear to us that plants are fenfible of pleafure or pain; whereas animals we know are affected by both. To a plant it is indifferent whether it is fupported or not, but to an animal it is not fo; it taftes felicity in receiving the neceffary fupplies, and languifhes underwant; the pleafure it receives in feeding is the motive to look for food, and it is bribed to fupport itfelf by the happines it meets with in taking in its nourifhment; what the plant does neceffarily, the animal does from choice, and is highly rewarded, by the pleafure it receives, forevery act of its duty in preferving itfelf, and propagating.

WHO can give attention to this œconomy, and at the fame time reflect on the profuse fupply that nature every where affords, for the fupport of the infinite numbers of animals, of different kinds, that fwarm upon this Globe, without concluding, that overflowing goodnefs and benevolence is an attribute of the infinitely wife, and powerful,. Author of Nature?

IN looking over the whole animal creation one fees infinite variety of inftincts, and talents, fome approaching nearer, fome more remotefrom, those dispositions that are to be met with in man, but all tending to the prefervation of the creature posses of them; but it does not appear to us that the fagacity, or differing, of the Brute goes any further than to its own immediate prefervation, and promoting what its inftinct leads it to; in this confists the brute's felicity, it feems to. be the measure of its understanding, from which it never fivery.

WHEN Man turns his eyes inwards, upon himfelf, he fees in himfelf the brute in great perfection, fimilar calls to preferve life, and to propagate the fpecies, and fimilar gratifications for obeying thofe calls; but then he feels fomewhat in himfelf more noble; fomewhat that diftinguifhes him from all the reft of the animal creation, that falls within his knowledge; he is confcious of reflection, he can complicate Ideas, and compare them together; he can difcover the relations of things; he can perceive the beauty, the order, the harmony of the creation; he can, in the creatures, fee the power, the wildom, and the goodnefs of the Creator; he finds in himfelf an unfatiable thirft after fomewhat that has no connection with the body, after knowledge; a ftrong defire to contemplate, a difpolition to admire, and to imitate perfection; a natural propenfity to gratitude, and thankfulnefs for favours; and, when he carries his thoughts to the fountain of all wifdom, power, and goodnefs, the author of the creation, a fulnefs of heart that breaks out in gladnefs, and adoration.

WHEN Man confiders that he alone, of all the animal creation, has got eyes to fee the beauty, and excellency of the Univerfe; that he alone has got an underftanding to difcover the perfection of the Creator in his works; that he alone has got a foul fitted to admire, to adore, and to rejoice in the goodnefs, and perfection of his Maker, talents unneceffary for preferving his life, or propagating the fpecies, but talents that qualify him for enjoying a much more permanent, and exalted kind of felicity than the other animals feem capable of relifhing : Can he doubt that thofe eyes, this underftanding, and that difpofition of mind, was given him to fit him for feeing, admiring, and adoring the fountain of all goodnefs and being? Can he queftion that the doing fo is indifpenfably his duty, as it would be his felicity i and can he imagine he anfwers the end of his creation, if, neglecting this care of those talents, he give himfelf wholly up to purfue those pleafures that are common to him with the brutes.

THE brutal appetites, and enjoyments, are nicely proportion'd to their ends, the prefervation, and propagation of the animal; the appetites call regularly for what is neceffary, and are fierce, in proportion as the want is great; when the want is fupplied, the defire ceafes; excefs fatiates, palls the appetite, and diforders the Machine.

It is not fo with the mental purfuits, and pleafures; the mind is abfolutely infatiable; the more it knows, the keener it thirfts after knowledge; its defires are endlefs, and the object infinite.

BESIDES the power of thinking, Man has the faculty of communicating by fpeech, and recording his thoughts. The obfervation of each individual, and within the compass of a short life, could not go very far in science; but we are so made, that each may be helped by the difcoveries of each other; the defire of communicating knowledge is almoft as ftrong as the defire to know; and, as the end of the capacity to know is manifeftly to difcover the excellency of the Creator in his works, that the man may be filled with admiration, and acknowledgment, it is impoffible to doubt that the end of the faculty of fpeech is to express, and communicate to each other, what we feverally difcover, to enlarge our ideas of the divine perfections, and to join in expressions of acknowledgment, and praife.

I r is not fo with the Brute; that is made to fnew, and not to know, the excellency of the Creator.

ONE difference there is, highly remarkable, between the meer animal, and the rational creature; Nature produces, fpontaneous, all that is neceffary for the brute; whereas fome art, befides induftry, is neceffary to make what Nature furnifhes ufeful, and comfortable to man. The brute is clothed by Nature; the earth uncultivated produces the herb; the feed the berry that is fit for its nutriment; raw meat fuits the ftomach of the carnivorous, nor is there any occasion for cookery, or drefs: but it is otherwife with Man; tho Nature furnifh abundantly the materials, yet skill, and induftry is neceffary to fit them for his ufe. By much the greateft part of the Globe would be uninhabited, if induftry did not furnifh clothing; grains muft be raifed; the juice of grapes and fruits muft be fermented, and meat muft be prepared for the ftomach, before Man can make use of it.

BECAUSE Nature furnishes abundantly for all the occasions of the brute, they are each independent of the other, without connection, or fociety, except in a few inflances where inflinct calls them to it; because it is in those inflances necessary for the prefervation, or propagation of the species.

But becaufe men have occasion for the labour, the skill, the talents of each other, they are naturally focial, and dependant on each other; they are fitted to promote the interests of each other. The foul is fo made, as to reap fatisfaction from acts of beneficence, to feel concern from the fufferings of its fellow-creatures, and to be knit in bonds of friendship, and alliance with fuch as entertain the fame fentiments.

T H U s nature has made men fit for fociety, as it has made fociety neceffary for them; but the end of making fociety neceffary for men, leads to a further confideration. No one can think that the infinitely wife, and powerful, could not have fo framed men, that nature, alone and unaided, fhould have fupplied all their wants; but, if he had had done fo, folitude muft have been the Inclination of the rational creature, and no more of the perfection of the Creator would have been known, or celebrated, than what fell within the obfervation of each individual. But as effential wifdom has difpofed man, neceffarily, for fociety, has provided them with proper faculties to communicate to each other their obfervations, and their fentiments, and has furnifhed them with inclinations to make fuch communications, and to join in acts of acknowledgment, and praife; it cannot be doubted that the chief, the high, and honourable end of fitting men for fociety, was to advance, and propagate the knowledge of Nature, and of the Author of it, and to promote and perfect that exercise of the foul, for which it was given to man.

WHEN Man furveys his own fpecies, framed for the contemplation of the works of God, fitted for admiring, and adoring the author, and fupporter; fo contrived as to aid each other in that great defign, and to contribute to one another's happinefs, not only in that, but in the common enjoyments of the animal life; he cannot help confidering each individual as the immediate fervant of the Creator; he cannot difpenfe with obferving the clofe relation, and connection, between the whole, and the neceffary dependance each has on the other.

AND, when he recollects what pleasure refults to the foul from confciousness of beneficent and merciful acts, what horror arises from the thoughts of cruelty, and injuffice; he must needs fee his duty towards his fellow-fervants, and with thankfulness acknowledge the goodness of the Creator, who has annexed immediate pleasure to each act of duty, and joined horror to transgression.

VIEW then Man in his perfect flate, as from the ruins ftill remaining, we certainly know he muft have been Bleffed with all the enjoyments that give relifh to the animal life; Diftinguifhed, from the reft of the vifible creation, by that intelligent principle that enables him to fee the infinite wifdom, power, and goodnels of the author of nature in his works; Chofen to be a witnels to the boundlefs perfections of the Eternal; Poffeiled of an infatiable defire of knowledge, and frefh difcoveries pouring in upon him, without ceafing; Qualified to admire, to praife, and to adore, and perpetual occafions offering themfelves for thofe rapturous exercifes; Placed in fociety, with companions fitted for the like enjoyments, and fo made as to promote his felicity, under tyes of duty to them, but duty the performance whereof was neceffarily to be rewarded with pleafure; Confcious of the favour of his infinitely powerful, and beneficent Creator, Creator, and therefore bleffed in the exercise of perpetual thankfulnets: View man, I fay, in this light, and fay whether imagination can fuggest to it felf a state of higher felicity, or conceive how man came by choice, and of his own free will, to relinquish it?

SUCH was man! but view him in his prefent condition, and you fee a creature still possessed of all those qualities that fitted him for feeing and enjoying the chief good, with fupreme delight; but you fee those talents monftroufly and milchievoufly employed; those eyes, and that understanding, that were given to perceive with transport the perfections of the creator in his works, are now no more employed in that glorious fervice; the heart, and the defire, that panted after, and rejoiced in the favour and protection of the fountain of goodnefs, have ceafed to act upon that object; all the mental powers, all the fprings of the heart, are ftill at work in fearch of felicity; but they feek for it where no real good is to be found, and contribute to the real mifery of unfortunate man. The fovereign good neglected, all those talents, that were given for discovering and enjoying it, are turned to the improvement of those pleasures that man has in common with the brutes. The skill and industry of that intelligent creature, are occupied in purfuing the gratifications of the brutal appetites; and, in fo doing, weaken and difable even those appetites from answering their real uses; or are employed in finding, and laying up means for fuch beaftly gratifications. In the place of focial affection, and benevolence to mankind, malice, envy, fraud, rapine, murder prevail; in the place of God, love chufes Self for its object. Knowledge, if looked after, is fought to gratify a vain, an ufelefs curiofity, but not to lead to the fource of knowledge, and life; in short, rebel to God, man sets up the vilest of his creatures in his room, and employs those faculties that were given for the fervice and enjoyment of the Eternal, in purfuits infinitely difhonourable, and offenfive.

IN this diftreffed, this frightful condition, human nature can hardly bear looking in upon it felf: the crime, as well as the folly, is fo monftrous, that ferious reflection on it muft four all the filly enjoyments that men anufe themfelves with, and create apprehenfions which, without fome foundation for hopes, would be abfolutely intolerable; and therefore mankind, to avoid reflections fo very difagreeable, fuffer the active principle, intended to lead to God, to carry them away from one brutish purfuit to another: if any beam of light, darting in upon their foul, fhould fhew them their duty, they they flut it out; becaufe it points out the forfeit; and, becaufe the amazing long-fuffering, and patience of the Deity, delays deferved punifhment, unhappy mortals are ready to harden themfelves into a belief, that there is no God to be offended at their treafon, or to flatter themfelves with hopes, that, as they live like brutes, they fhall die like brutes, and by ceafing to be, efcape vengeance.

SUCH is the depraved flate of wretched mankind ! and fuch the perverfe turn of those whose minds are for debauched with brutal pleasures, as to like the beaftly flate in which they are. But they, in whom the Image of God is not altogether defaced, who entertain honourable notions of the fupreme Goodness, who fee with wonder the long-fuffering and forbearance of the infinitely Juft, and who cannot conceive, that Effential Juftice could difpense with vengeance for a moment, if some confideration of infinite value did not interpose, are willing to entertain hopes that fome ransom may have been found for the offence of mankind, fome expedient provided, by the wifdom and goodness of God, for obliterating their crimes, and reftoring them to the favour and protection of the Eternal; and to have those hopes confirmed, and improved into a well-grounded and certain belief, is the chief object of their wishes, as it would be the only folid foundation of their happines.

WHOEVER has the fainteft glimpfe of fuch hopes, if he acts rationally, will not ceafe enquiring, with the utmoft earneftnefs and accuracy, till he difcover whether there is any just foundation for them, or no; he will confult nature, he will examine authorities, and will be equally follicitous not to admit infufficient, as he will be not to reject fufficient evidence.

IN fuch an enquiry, beginning with the natural light ftill remaining unextinguifhed, and carefully feparating what does, from what does not flow from it; examining the notions commonly received about the Deity, and comparing them with the dictates of reafon, many propositions will appear demonstratively true: for example;

1. THAT the Deity is infinitely powerful; good, and intelligent, is deducible from nature.

2. THAT the Deity is merciful, fo as to pardon fin, and to be reconcileable to finners, is not deducible from nature.

3. THAT the Deity is possessed of qualities like to those in the foul of man, such as love, anger, compassion, is not deducible from nature.

4.2

4. THAT there is a plurality of Perfons in the Deity, is not deducible from nature.

5. THAT man's fin, upon atonement, is to be pardoned, and he reconciled to the Deity, is not deducible from nature.

6. THAT the fufferings of a man, to whom one of the Perfons of the Deity was to be joined, was to be that atonement, is not deducible from nature.

7. THAT the effect of this atonement and reconciliation, was to give all mankind a right to approach, and rely on the protection and beneficence of a placated Deity, is not deducible from nature.

8. THAT the Deity, thus appealed, is delighted in prayers and praifes, is not deducible from nature.

9. THAT there is a correspondence between the fouls of men and the Deity, is not deducible from nature.

10. THAT the prayers of men are acceptable to the Deity, heard, and anfwered, through the interceffion of that Perfon whole fufferings atoned for fin, is not deducible from nature.

IF then thefe things concerning the Deity, and man's flate, are true, and of abfolute neceffity to be known to man, for his comfort, and towards enabling him to perform any acceptable duty to his Creator, his knowledge muft come by revelation, and that knowledge muft be kept up by inftitutions, or records.

I. THAT there is fuch a thing as right and wrong, may, and muft be known, without revelation.

2. THAT right must be attended with reward, and wrong with punishment, is known without revelation.

3. THAT therefore there must be a future state, for rewards and punishments, must be known without revelation.

4. THAT man is in a depraved flate, at enmity with the Deity, is known without revelation; and must have been known to foon as that flate of enmity began.

IN this depraved flate, man, attentive to his own circumflances, must have been in a condition infinitely wretched, the object of the just indignation of the Almighty, here and hereafter; helplefs, and hopelefs, becaufe no defence against offended justice; and must have continued incapable of hope, or comfort, or of attempting any means means of placating, or of obtaining the protection of the Deity, unlefs the mercy of God, and his acceptance of the atonement provided, had been revealed to him, with evidence of the authority of that revelation, fo convincing as to gain abfolute belief; this, and nothing lefs, could render life tolerable.

1. W E know certainly that all men are, and from the earlieft ages have been, in a flate of enmity and corruption.

2. THAT men now have, and from the earlieft times have had, comfort from a perfuation of mercy and forgiveness from God, contrary to reason, and the strongest evidence which from thence can refult.

3. THAT the whole world, from the earlieft times, ufed nearly the fame rites, ceremonies, and inftitutions religious, for placating the Deity, averting wrath, procuring favour, returning thanks, by Sacrifices, Burnt-offerings, Blood; means that, in nature, have no fort of connection with the end proposed, and therefore could not possibly have had their origin from reason, or natural light.

AND, as this belief, and there religious observances, prevailed over all mankind, without any support from, but rather contrary to reason, it is a just conclusion, that the authority for such a belief, and such observances, must have been exceeding high and strong; and man cannot think of any sufficient authority to have produced that universal faith, short of divine revelation.

THE doctrine of remiffion of fins, and expiation by blood, is, 'till the fecret is explained by revelation, fo defitute of any foundation in reason, and apparently so contrary to it, that no Reasoner could ever have thought of it; and, if he had, no one could have given credit to it, without some convincing proof for the authority of that doctrine, which, as has been faid, could not possibly have been from reason. The universal reception then of that doctrine, is a demonstration, in its own kind, that it had a divine authority.

IF the Deity had determined to pardon man, by and through an Interceffor, and upon fatisfaction, that would not have anfwered the end; without man were acquainted with, and believed it, he would remain in the fame gloomy flate of defpair, without the leaft glimpfe of hopes, or encouragement to pray, to praife, to love, or to rejoice in the mercy and falvation of God; which would have left him a prey to his terrors and his lufts, and must have determined him to have fhut out all thoughts of the Deity. For nothing could poffibly determine man to hope, to pray, to praife, to ferve, to rejoice in the protection of the Deity, but a firm conviction and belief that God was placated, would forgive, and protect, and was pleafed with fervices.

IF then it was the intention of God to pardon man, to reftore him to a capacity of ferving him, to reclaim him from his finful flate, to encourage him to love, fear, and ferve his Creator; it was abfolutely neceffary, towards that defign, to acquaint man with his intentions, to give fuch proof of those intentions, as fhould convince, and thoroughly perfuade those to whom the revelation was made, and to preferve fuch evidence of that revelation to mankind, as fhould be fufficient to fupport their faith and hope.

THE lowest degree of faith that can possibly be fufficient to quiet the foul of man, and to reftore him to a capacity of ferving comfortably his God, and trufting to his favour and protection, is a firm conviction that God is placable, and will pardon upon repentance, and protect.

WHATEVER degree of evidence or revelation fixed this in man's mind, reflored him quiet, and a poffibility of endeavouring to gain the favour of God; and, fuppofing the belief abfolute, must determine the man fo believing, to feek and ferve God, to the best of his ability and understanding.

THEY to whom the merciful intentions of God have been the moft fully revealed, and to whom the evidence of that revelation has the moft diffinctly appeared, are in a much happier condition, and have many more incentives and helps to piety and devotion, than those who have just light enough to know that God is merciful, and to believe that he will pardon, upon repentance, and a hearty conversion of the defire of the foul towards him. But, if the belief of the latter is total and abfolute, it may change his heart, and his course of life, and bring him within the favour and protection of his God. Hence faith, so much prized in the old and new Teftament; not that faith, as fuch, is of value, but because where it truly is, it must produce a change of foul, and obedience. No man, who verily believes any fruit to be poison, will tafte it; and let any man who knowingly fins, fay what he will, he has not faith, when he fo acts.

As this belief is abfolutely neceffary to all mankind, and muft have been intended to reach them all, the evidence for inducing it, muft must be of that nature as to accommodate itself to all species of men. There must be that fort of evidence that leads the vulgar, the unthinking, the illiterate; and there must be also such proof as shall determine the ingenious, the inquisitive, the learned.

By much the greatest part of mankind have no other evidence for this belief, than general received opinion; what his been held by their fathers, and all their acquaintance, passes for truth, and produces resolutions and actions.

It is impossible to believe any thing more firmly, than the vulgar do that the Earth stands still, and that the Sun moves round; a belief as general, and as absolute, of the facts revealed for the comfort and falvation of mankind, would produce a conduct very different from what we fee.

WHERE the common opinions about the devil, witches, witchcraft,  $\mathfrak{C}c$ . prevail, the belief is transmitted to posterity, and the children doubt as little as the fathers did.

IF these things were true, and capable of demonstration, the vulgar would believe, not because of the demonstration, which they have not leifure, or learning, or capacity to enter into, but because of the fixed opinions of others, from whom they learn.

FOR as they are not true, nay fome of them demonstratively falfe, the vulgar believe them, becaufe they are not qualified to examine the demonstration.

BUT if there is not fuch evidence as is fit to fatisfy the learned and the inquifitive, it cannot produce belief in them; and the vulgar opinion cannot be of long continuance, where the learned and the inquifitive declare against it.

THE evidence therefore attending revelation ought to be fuch as was fit to create and continue a very firm and general belief, and opinion, amongft the groß of mankind; and to conquer, and answer the doubts and feruples of the inquisitive and the learned.

THAT the first publication of the merciful intentions of God to men, and the declaration of fo much as he thought fit to reveal concerning himfelf, and what was to be done and believed, was attended with fufficient evidence to fupport the authority of the revelation, cannot be doubted, because the defign was to gain belief.

AND if, in every fucceeding age, the fame publication had been made, with the like evidence, there is no doubt we fhould have no unbeliever.

Buт,

BUT, in fact, we fee it has not pleased God to repeat, in this manner, the evidence of his revelation.

NOR is the not repeating the evidence, to fatisfy the curiofity of impertinent and prefumptuous objectors, who measure the conduct of the Deity by their own vain imaginations, any just cause of doubting the original revelation, if the proofs of that revelation are fufficient to induce belief.

GOD could have prevented man's finning originally; he could have reftored him abfolutely, to his priftine ftate; and he could have continued ftanding and perpetual obvious miracles, for confirming revelation; but he has done neither of thefe. And, though no other anfwer could be given to the queftion, why has he not? but that it has not fuited his wife feheme, for the government of his Grace to man, it is beyond all doubt fufficient.

IF it was the feheme of the Deity;

To create man perfect, with a capacity of retaining that perfection, or of falling from it, which we call liberty, without interpofing further, to determine him either to the one, or to the other;

To reftore him to a capacity of regaining happines, by publishing means of falvation, with divine or supernatural evidence, and appointing the most feasible means for continuing the belief of that revelation, without farther interposing, 'till the ill use of the freewill, or liberty of man, made farther interposition necessary; and

To difplay omnipotent power, or remarkable events, when the notable defection of mankind made it neceffary, in order to confirm or reftore the revelation, at that time, and to produce fill ftronger and ftronger evidence for it, to fucceding generations; who dare prefume to find fault with fuch œconomy ?

Who can tell what wife ends the Deity may have to answer by shewing, in the feveral stages of the world, and under the different degrees of light and information, what use the heart of man was to make of free-will, and of the mercy of God offered?

IF it was the intention of the Deity to reveal to man the method of Salvation; That a Saviour was to come in the flefh, by his death and fuffering to atone for fin; and that the Saviour, having abolifhed fin by his fufferings, was to become interceffor for man, to reconcile him to the Deity, and produce communication between them; no doubt this might be, by convincing evidence, intimated and publifhed at first: and the queffion is, what would be the most proproper method for continuing to posterity the belief of the truth for revealed?

I T does not appear that, in the earlieft times, writing by letters, or recording facts any other way, than by emblematical or hieroglyphical reprefentations, was known or in ufe.

AND, if writing by letters had been in use, such writing, to prove it of divine authority to succeeding generations, would require evidence.

TRADITION furely was one way; but that, without other help, not very certain, and liable to infinite miftakes; as well as the authority of it, for that reason, liable to doubt.

BUT, if to Tradition was added certain conftant, ritual, and emblematical obfervances, at fixed times, for ever to be continued and endure; then, in proportion as the emblems were expressive, and univerfally received, the memory and belief of the matter represented would remain diffinct and ftrong, and the end of recording be obtained.

ANNIVERSARY, monthly, weekly days observed, preserve fresh the memory of most events.

IF therefore it was the command of God, that to keep in mind the revelation that a Saviour, the first-born of a woman, should die for the fins of men, fhould by his blood atone, and become Interceffor for mankind, Man fhould kill a kid, or a lamb, fhed its blood, fprinkle the blood towards the fame place which the Deity directed to be emblematical of the place of its refidence, choosing a perfect, unfpotted male, as the emblem of the fuffering Saviour, and a perfect first born amongst men, as the emblem of the first-born, the Interceffor; and, if this emblematical act was to be repeated once, or oftner, every year, on a flated day; once every moon, on the first day; once every week, on the feventh day; and twice every day. morning and evening; and if, on those occasions, men were in the emblems to fee, with forrow, the reprefentation of the blood they forfeited, and, with joy, to entertain the hopes of mercy through that blood, which the blood of the beast facrificed reprefented; and to believe that God, on those occasions, was willing to hear their prayers, and receive their praifes: the invention of man cannot devife any other method, fo likely to preferve and perpetuate, the knowledge and belief of a revelation, fo neceffary to mankind.

MEN, indeed, might err, after a courfe of generations, in the expofition and application of those emblems, and emblematical actions; and and, when the true fenfe and intention of them was varied, or in any degree loft, imagination would fuggeft other, and different, nay even falfe meanings; but, fo long as the obfervance remained, a belief of placating the Deity by blood muft remain : which belief is, of all others, the moft unreafonable, except as it is explained, by the original, and only true fenfe and meaning, of the emblems and inffitutions.

THUS what was intended by the prieft's interceffory office, was loft, though officiating by a prieft remained; what was intended by the first born's being to discharge the priestly office, was forgot, long before men ceafed to look upon the right of priesthood to be in the first-born; what was intended by facrificing a perfect MALE, was loft, whilft great accuracy was employed to take care that nothing but what was perfect should be facrificed; nay, fuch was the weaknefs of mankind, that they forgot the blood fhed was typical and emblematical only, and imagined a real vertue in it, than which nothing could be more abfurd : but ftill they continued with the greateft zeal to make use of facrifice, to believe it a mean of atoning for fins, of averting punifhments, of procuring favours from the Deity; they thought Sacrifices made their prayers and praifes acceptable, that there was fomething facred in it, that it bound contracts and covenants of all kinds, and that the Deity expected and required facrifice of them, and would be highly offended if that fervice was difcontinued.

So that, notwithftanding all the errors, wandrings, and falfe imaginations of mankind, they ftill retained, by this EMBLEMATICAL INSTITUTION, a firong belief that the Deity was placable, and that fins were forgiveable; which left it poffible for them to hope, and to endeavour to gain the divine favour, and confequently to love and ferve the Deity. And the perpetual and univerfal use of facrifice, with particular rites, and under particular observances, after the original meaning and intention of them was lost, is a proof, not only of their divine origin, but also of the reality of that Sacrifice which those emblems were intended to reprefent.

THE original and primary use of facrifice, and of all other religious inflitutions, was commemorative of the original revelation, a fort of daily MEMORIAL, or Record of what God declared, and man believed and hoped. But, as the declaration of God regarded a future event, every one, almost, of those inflitutions and emblematical matical ordinances must be looked upon also as prophetick, which, when the event predicted happened, proves a demonstration, much above what HUMANITY could invent, of the Divinity of the INSTI-TUTION, and of the certainty of the hopes and belief founded on that event.

BESIDES the original intention of being commemorative and predictive, there was a very ufeful defign in the annual, monthly, weekly, and daily Services, to give men frequent occafions of fearching into themfelves, as in the prefence of the Deity, of confeffing, worfhipping, and adoring; and fo reforming, and preferving their minds from folly. This, in time, they miftook for the chief end, forgetting the chief end almost entirely; and at last, they greatly corrupted even the fecondary defign, imagining that there was merit in the facifice, as such; that the Deity loved facifice, and expected it, as a tribute that was due : tho' God never required Sacrifice (it is in this fense the Scripture fays fo) for his own fake, as one may fay, but inflituted it for the fake of men, as a memorial to keep in mind what he had revealed. To this end was the frequency, as well as to give frequent opportunities of worship, the true fervice of the heart, and reflection, which vain man almost entirely forgot.

As the antiquity, and univerfality of facrifice, notwithstanding the various corruptions, with which, by the imaginations of men, it was infected, is a proof of its divine original; fo is the ridiculous POLYTHEISM of antiquity, evidence, in fome degree, of a plarality of PERSONS in the Deity; as the opinion, in all appearance, must have flowed from fome revelation, or inftitution, for preferving the memory and knowledge of that revelation.

NOTHING is more remote from any foundation in reafon than the doctrine of the TRINITY, and therefore it is a fair conclusion, that it must be owing to REVELATION, real or supposed.

As inconfiftent as the TRINITY feems to be with reafon, *Poly*theifm is no lefs to; all nature speaks for ONE Deity, and even the doctrine of the TRINITY supposes it.

AND yet in almost all the antient nations we find Polytheism eftablished; they had a plural to the noun GoD: nay, the eldest of all languages, the Hebrew, uses almost always the plural noun ELOHIM, when speaking of the Deity, frequently joined with plural verbs; the'the Scripture, the only book extant in that language, takes care to let us know that this plural ELOHIM is but ONE Deity. Now, Now, as the knowledge of the TRINITY, if true, muft be had by REVELATION, and not by REASON, if the Deity was pleafed to difelofe fo much of ITS own nature to mankind, IT muft do it by referring to ideas taken from natural things; and, if the knowledge of that difeovery was to be recorded, whilft hieroglyphical or emblematical was the only WRITING, there muft be a conjunction of three Emblems in one, to reprefent what was intended: Such conjunctions, by Egyptian and other monuments yet extant, appear to have been very frequent in earlier times, and very probably owed their origin to the lawful emblems first proposed by the Deity; and the word in the Hebrew used to fignify the IMAGE or Reprefentation of the Deity, carried about as an IDOL, is plural alfo, [TERAPHIM] tho relating only to one image or idol.

THE imagination of man, however, as in the cafe of facrifice, dropping the only rational thing, the UNITY, made use of the plurality of Persons in the one Deity, to coin a plurality of Deities; and, by retaining that notion against all reason, gives ground to conclude that it must have flowed from some very high, the' mistaken original; and to enquire what the soundaries of sextraordinary an opinion may have been.

As the imagination of man, proceeding from one miftake to another, muft, at laft, have obliterated the knowledge of all REVELA-TION, notwithftanding the wifeft precaution to preferve it; it behoved the Deity, perfifting ftedfaft in the purpofe of mercy to mankind, to renew that REVELATION from time to time, and to reftify abufes with fuch authority, for the renewal and reftification, as was fufficient evidence of the truth of what was revealed; and, if that merciful and perfect Being was to flut up all REVELATION, and to ceafe from farther interpolition by extraordinary appearances amongft men, it behoved him to make the REVELATION fo compleat, and to leave it fo fixed and unalterable, and attended with fuch Evidence for the truth of it, as fhould leave no further room for error or doubt, amongft those who, with respectful hearts to the Deity, fought after the truth.

THO' it is extremely obvious, that fuch a REVELATION and RECTIFICATION muft have been, yet feek for it amongst all the monuments, the wisdom, the records of the heathen world, and you shall feek in vain; nothing but vanity and madness. The wisest of them, at least of those that have come to our hands, feem to have known known little of MAN's fallen, desperate state, and appear to have (when they turn'd their thoughts to Religion) known nothing further than a parcel of the lyes and forgeries of their Priest.

So that, if any of the ancient Heathens wrote before their REVE-LATION was totally corrupted, it is loft, having been neglected by their fucceffors, who did not underftand what it meant.

BUT in looking over Mankind, as they are at this day, we find a NATION in very particular circumftances, Diffinguifhed from all the People that are, or perhaps ever were upon the face of the earth; the CHILDREN, as they believe, of one Man; Profeffing a Religion different from that of all the Nations that now are fcattered up and down the whole earth; Without dominion, power, or property any where; Tenacious, to death, of their own Religion, and Opinions; for that reafon defpifed, hated, oppreffed, and perfecuted; and yet, fubfifting in fo prodigious numbers, that, were they to be brought together, they would prove a mighty People, EXAMINING the hiftory of this People (I mean the fews) we find they were very Powerful about 2000 years ago; Poffeffed of a country, their own, and called by their own Name; in the full Exercife of a Religion with Ceremonies, and Services peculiar to themfelves; in a firm Belief derived from their holy Books, which they held to be REVELATION, that fome very extraordinary Perfon, of their blood and kindred, fhould then arife, who fhould deliver them from all their Enemies, and fet up a Kingdom above all the Kingdoms of the earth.

W E find fome time after, that, encouraged by this opinion, they quarrelled with the Romans; and, after the most obstinate defence that ever People made, were utterly overthrown, their City and Temple destroyed, and those that escaped the fword scattered up and down over the face of the earth,

W E find that the particularity of their Faith and Service, the diftinction that fubfifted between them and other Nations, and the feditious field between them and other Nations, and the feditious for a great Deliverer to come, brought total diffipation upon them, fo that they became every where the object of fevere laws and ill ufage.

AND we find, nevertheles, that for near 1700 years they have remained, under all these diffress and difficulties, a People diffinct from those they live amongst, tenacious of their own Religion and Observances, not to be bribed or frightned from them, and fully convinced their Religion is immediately from God, and that the great DELIVERER, for them, is still to come.

A Circumftance fo very fingular calls for extraordinary attention. Of the many Nations and Kindreds famous for Prowrefs, for Laws, for religious Opinions, is there any that remained, that preferved their Name after a Conqueft? Did not all mix and blend themfelves with the Conqueror? Of all the Religions, that ever have been, did any flick fo clofe to the profeffion of it, that, for a feries of Ages, they did not forfake it for the Religion of the Country they became fubjects of; that infamy and oppreffion could not drive them from it, but rather rivetted them the ftronger in it?

AND this is flill the more amazing, That the Religion they hold is of all others the most absord, as they understand it; and that the hopes they entertain are, undoubtedly, chimerical and false.

ENQUIRE of this People, and you shall find their Faith is founded on a Book, which contains their LAW, faid to have come immediately from God, the HISTORY of this Nation, and certain HYMNS, and PROPHECYES, all which they firmly believe to have been written by Divine Infpiration, and to contain the WILL, and WORD of God.

THIS Book they entertain with the higheft effeem, and preferve with fuch forupulous exactnefs, that there are in the Copies of it fewer various readings than in any other book extant, that they have never fuffered a various reading, how true foever, to enter into the text; and that, as fond as they are of their method of Pointing, for varying the found, and thereby the fenfe in fome degree, of the Hebrew words, they have never dared to add those Points to the Copies of their LAW read in their Synagogues, believing that fuch an addition would be a prophanation.

THAT this Book is not fictitious, nor in any part forged to gratify the vanity of the Jews, but, when first given to them, came with authority fufficient to enforce the reception of it, will appear to those who look into it, from this observation; That, throughout, the Jews are deferibed as the vilest, the wickedest of all men; They are severely reproved for their faults, DESTRUCTION is threatned, nay it is formally, and over and over again, predicted that they shall be confounded, that they shall be Dark, and Blind, that the Book which they keep shall be fealed up from them, that they shall not understand, understand, and therefore shall be rejected; and the Nations, at large, taken to be the People of God, in their room.

RECEIVING the Book originally, with fuch a fling in it, fhews the Authority was high; and preferving it entire, without flriking out or altering fuch paffages, proves the Book was held facred. Not to mention, here, the argument arifing for the authority of the Book, from the exact completion of the Predictions.

THE first curfory view of this Book must fill any man, who has looked into all the Remains of the antient Learning, Philosophy, and Religion of the Nations with a strong preposites of the favour: Amongst all these nothing but folly, and impertinence, is to be met with; no tolerable Idea of the Deity; none of the Duty of Man, from the true motive; none at all of the chief and peculiar Felicity of the human race, in the enjoyment of the favour of God.

But in this Book, from one end to the other, the Praifes of God, defcribed as One Spiritual, Infinite, Eternal, Merciful, Gracious, Long-fuffering, Just, Powerful, in fhort infinitely Perfect, are every where to be met with. The Duty of Man is placed where it ought to be; and the Felicity of Man is defcribed to confift in the enjoyment of the favour of the Deity, to be obtained by conforming to the Will of God, and yielding him the heart; this is the language, the fpirit of the whole; nothing contradictory to this, whatever vain men may fancy, to the contrary, from fome ill underflood paffages.

THIS Reflection will not be fo prevailing with the unlearned, who, in the most common books fince the Christian Ara, meet with the most just, and at the fame time the most noble, and sublime Ideas, which are all, the they do not know fo much, taken from the Jews facred Book: But it will be very cogent with the that have read all the Remains of the Heathen World, prior to Christianity, and who alone can make the comparison, and fee the peculiarity of the character of this Book, as it differs from all others, the productions of Men.

THIS Book, taken all together, feems intended to promote Religious respect and fervice to the Deity; and to raise strong hopes, and confidence of mercy and felicity.

It contains a compleat fyftem of SACRIFICATURE, with all the rites and religious observances thereto belonging, faid to be delivered to the Children of Ifrael by the Deity, in the most folemn manner, by the hands of Moses.

THIS Syftem which is called the LAW, or the DIRECTORY, is faid D 2 to to have been published by the Deity, in a manner attended with great figns and wonders, in the prefence of all the people, as to fome part of it; and, as to the rest, by Moses, to whose authority God, by very supprising miracles, gave credit.

ŤHIS LAW is faid to have been reduced into Writing by Mofes, at the command of God, to be for ever preferved, and observed, with promifes of perpetual felicity, in cafe of observing, and threats of BLINDNESS, and DESTRUCTION, to the whole Nation, in cafe of not observing it.

THIS LAW was given to the Children of Ifrael, the Iffue of Abraham, Ifaac, and facob, to each of whom it was promifed that out of their Seed fhould arife That which fhould blefs the whole earth. This people is faid to have been, by the immediate providence of Gcd, kept diffinct from all other Nations, till the LAW was directly given to them; and, then, by the very tenor and tendency of that LAW, was to remain diffinct from all other people, fo long as their Nation fubfifted.

By the fcheme of this INSTITUTION it appears, That the people were to be under the immediate government of the Deity; to poffefs a fruitful land, in the middle of the then beft peopled part of the earth; that God was to be in a particular manner prefent with them, to be confulted with, in a facred place (first in the Tabernacle, and then in the Temple) by facred Rites, and to give decisions, and directions; And that, from time to time, he was to raife up Prophets to admonifh, rebuke, and direct.

BESIDES the Writings afcribed to Mofes, called the LAW, the Book contains the HISTORY of the Nation from Mofes's time to their firft Captivity, for their defection from God, predicted firft in the Law, and afterwards by fucceeding Prophets.

IT contains the writings and predictions of feveral Prophets, and the PSALMS, or religious HYMNS of the Nation, employed in the divine Service, and composed by infpired men for the use of the people.

IN these HYMNS, and other writings, a fystem of the faith and hope of the enlightned Jews is to be met with; the true meaning and use of EMBLEMS, SYMBOLS, and TYPES is explained; errors in practice, and opinion are reproved; the expectation of mercy and falvation by a Divine Perfon is raifed; That Perfon is, under various representations, described; The Change of the, then, present INSTI-TUTION TUTION for a better is intimated; The BLINDNESS, and total defection, and deftruction of the Jews, with their State and Temple, is predicted; The CALLING into their room the Gentiles is foretold; And the time, for that great event, limited and deferibed with characters, and marks, that cannot be miftaken.

IF the Book, then, that contains all these things be Divine, it is plain that God did not leave Man without farther affistance to aid and induce his faith, after promulgation of Peace, but that he renewed the glad TYDINGS; as, from the nature of the thing, ought to have been done.

AND, if it fhall appear to be true, that the manner in which he renewed that Revelation has furnished a demonstrative, permanent evidence, which never needs to be renewed, of his grace and favour to loft Man, it calls for belief, and the highest acknowledgment of his mercy, and wisdom.

IF the hiftory of Mofes his miracles, his communication with the Deity, is true, there is no possibility to call in question the truth of what he delivers.

As the LAW, and INSTITUTION founded by Mofes was to eftablifh Religion, and to make Mercy and Peace known to the whole Earth, the Writings afcribed to him begin with the CREATION, and carry down a general account of the concerns of mankind, till the Election of Abraham and his Seed.

THE thing Moses begins with is the CREATION of the HEAVENS and the EARTH by the Deity, which, tho' true to the Conviction of all mankind, no antient Wise-man ever found out. Here is no ridiculous Theogonia, no eternal Chaos, no fortuitous concourse of Atoms, but a fair and a true declaration, In the beginning God created the Heavens and the Earth.

H E further takes notice of the Inftitution of the Sabbath, which, tho' the Antients obferved, they knew not the reason, or occasion of.

THE declaration of this undifcovered truth gives ftrong prepoffession in favour of the rest.

THE next important thing is that Man fell from a flate of Innocence. This, as has been faid, every living man muft find to be true, upon examination; and yet none of the Wife, whofe works have come to us, ever thought of it; nothing more certain, nothing more important to be attended to; nothing lefs known; but this Mofes  Moses diffinctly relates as the cause, or at least the occasion, of every thing that followed.

THE third thing he marks is the confusion, and desperate state, in which mankind was, upon the FALL; afhamed of his fault, without hope in the mercy of God, and therefore ftudious to hide him-Tell from him. This, the FALL being true, must necessarily be true too; and therefore we readily believe Mofes.

THE fourth thing he relates is, that God revealed his purpose of mercy to Mankind, and thereby deliver'd them from dread, defpair, and confusion. The words, in which Moses relates the promise of mercy are, that the Seed of the Woman (hould bruife the head of the Serpent, and the Sced of the Serpent (bould bruife his heel.

THESE words, which are all that is faid, do not, it is true, fay that this Seed of the Woman fhould be facificed; the' bruifing the heel looks mighty like the fuffering of the lower, and least noble, part of that Seed; nor do they fay that factifice, and the other obfervances of the LAW were then inftituted; but it appears plainly that, foon after, Cain and Abel offered, and that at a flated or appointed time; it appears Noah facrificed, and that, in his days, Man was commanded to abstain from eating BLOOD, as a thing facred; it appears the Patriarchs did fo, without any precedent, inftitution, or commandment, recorded, and that their Sacrifices were respected by the Deity; and it appears that all the nations of the Earth, who fprung from the first PARENTS, practifed Sacrifice, with nearly the fame rites: Wherefore, it may fairly be concluded that facrifice, and the rites thereto belonging, were inftituted upon the first promulgation of the EVANGELIUM, the tydings of mercy, and from that Inflitution were transmitted to all mankind : and it would imply an absurdity to fuppofe, that this EMBLEMATICAL, COMMEMORATIVE, obfervance was inflituted without man's knowing the reafon, and meaning of it.

WE know by Hiftory, without the help of Moles, that all Mankind facrificed in hopes of mercy; from reafon we difcover that those hopes must have been founded on REVELATION, and that Sacrifice (which of itfelf could fignify nothing) must have been no more than a memorial, by Inftitution. And now from Mofes we learn that those hopes were actually founded on explicite revelation by the God of Nature; and that Sacrifice, which the fame God fays in itfelf fignifies nothing, was practiced, just after, by the favourites of the Deity, Deity, and acceptable to him, and that he gave a new model of that Inftitution, correcting abufes in the wildernefs.

WE learn, next, from Mofes that God was pleafed at different times to appear to, and converfe, with Men, Adam, Enoch, Noah; and that, neverthelefs, men corrupted themfelves fo monftroufly an early inftance whereof is Cain's killing his brother Abel, that the Deity brought on a FLOOD, which deftroyed the whole earth, and with it all men, except Noah and his family.

THIS FLOOD all antient Nations have confused tradition about, and tho' Exuviæ ftill remaining near the furface of the Earth give very ftrrong evidence of it, yet there is no fensible account of it from the Ancients, which ftrongly raifes the credit and authority of Moses. Writings.

By the direction to take into the ARK a greater number of clean than of unclean beafts, and by Noah's practice, immediately after the FLOOD, of facrificing of every clean beaft and bird, it is evident the diffinction, of clean and unclean, does not depend originally on the LAW of Mofes, but has its origin before the FLOOD, probably at the first publication of Grace to Adam.

As the FLOOD deftroyed all the corrupted, and to Noah and his family was demonstration of the power of, and obedience due to the Deity, this great event was a total extirpation of all false Religion; and, humanly speaking, it was to be hoped the faith, and religious fervice, of men would have continued long pure.

BUT that was not the cafe; for, as Adam's fon Cain finned early, fo did Noah's Son Ham; he merited to be pronounced accurfed of his father, foon after the deliverance from the FLOOD; and, before the memory of that dreadful judgment was loft, men meditated the fetting up a false Religion, and Service, to the Heavens at Babel, which the Deity difappointed, by confounding and dividing their IMAGINA-TIONS, fo that they feparated and difperfed at that time.

As Moles relates the deftruction of the Antediluvian world, by theFLOOD, fo he gives an account of repeopling the earth by the three fons of Noah, giving a brief abstract of the Descent of the families from these three fons; and it is extremely remarkable, and scurate and judicious inquiry into the prophane records and monuments extant, it does appear the world has been repeopled in the: the manner which Mofes defcribes, and nearly about the fame time, counting backwards from known periods, by the jufteft rules.

AFTER the account given of the irreligious attempt at Babel. of the defcent of mankind from Noak's Sons, and of the peopling of the earth, Mofes begins the hiftory of the Jewish Nation, defcended from Abraham, who was fprung of Sem. This hiftory, as to certain events, is very particular: It defcribes Abraham as called, immediately by God, away from a family and land that had begun to corrupt itfell, to enter into a formal covenant with God : It defcribes the promife of the land of Canaan to Abraham, and to his feed, which is expressed in very extraordinary terms : It deferibes the fame promifes repeated to Ifaac, and to Jacob: It relates the inftitution of CIRCUMCISION, which, if inftituted before, feems to have been left off, to be observed by the whole race of Abraham: It relates the manner of the Children of Israel's going into Egypt, their bitter fervitude there, and their feparation from the Egyptians : It records their miraculous deliverance by the hand of Mofes: It relates their long fojourning in the wildernets, and their progrefs toward the land promifed : It relates the miraculous and furpriling manner of the promulgation of the LAW by the Deity, with extraordinary figns and wonders : It records all the Rites and Ceremonies of the Sacrificature, and of the whole religious fervice of the Jewish Church: It records the Conflitution of the Jewish civil government, which, as well as the religious, had God for its head: It deferibes the Tabernacle, the refidence of the fupreme Governor, till the Temple should be built : It records the promife of the Advent of another Prophet, like unto Moles, who was to be heard : It relates a formal cutting off the Type of the predicted PURIFYER, or the renewal thereof, and the Terms upon which the People should partake of the benefit of that PURIFI-CATION, commonly translated a COVENANT between God and the People; wherein strict obedience is promised on the part of the people, and, on that condition, great and perpetual bleffings promised on the part of God; but a manifest prediction is, at the same time, made of the people's defection, and of their future defiruction.

AND the end of all this furprizing difpolition, and œconomy, manifeftly is to record, with great accuracy, the LAW with its feveral RITES and CEREMONIES, and to recommend the exact obfervance of it, to the end it never fhould be loft, or fall out of the view and knowledge of Mankind; but the particulars of it, and the authority by (25) by which it was promulgated, fhould remain attefted, to future generations, by better and ftronger evidence than any other matter of fact ever was amongft men.

AND, if the giving this LAW, and the felecting and conflicting this people to be the depositaries of it, in this manner, was the immediate act of God, it must certainly be of infinite confequence to have had that LAW fo recorded, and preferved; and yet if you look only at the obvious and outfide appearance of that LAW, it was of little or no use, and the observance of it has ceased many hundred years ago, and is now, without a miracle, become impracticable; whereas, viewing it in the light already hinted, it becomes the evidence of all hope and faith.

THE evidence the Jews had to believe the feveral matters related by Mofes, preceding the deliverance from  $\mathcal{Egvpt}$ , was, fo far as we know, no more than Mofes's word, whofe credit was fufficiently eftablifhed by the teftimonies given to him by the Deity; but, at the fame time, it is not certain that they had not fome diffinct tradition concerning thefe things.

BUT, as to his authority, and the authority of the Laws and Inflitutions given by him, they had; and their children and we, who take it from their children, have the flrongest evidence the nature of the thing is capable of: For,

1/t, THE whole People, an infinite multitude, were witneffes of all the miracles wrought preceeding the deliverance from Egypt, and of the final miracle that atchieved their deliverance, in memory whereof, the PASSOVER, an annual tolemnity, was infituted, with the firongeft injunctions to acquaint their children with the caufe of that observance, and to mark that night throughout all their generations for ever.

2 dly, T H E whole People were witneffes to the miracle in paffing the Red-Sea, and fung that hymn which Mofes composed on that occasion, which was preferved for the use of their children.

3dly, THE whole People were witneffes to the dreadful promulgation of the LAW from Sinai, with which they were alfo to acquaint their children, and the feaft of PENTECOST was annually to be obferved on the day on which that Law was given; befides that, the very Tables in which the ten COMMANDS were written,

were

were deposited in the Ark, and remained, at least, till the building of Jolomon's Temple, and probably till the destruction of it.

4thly, THE whole People were witneffes to the many miracles wrought, during the fpace of forty years, in the wildernefs; to the Pillar of FIRE and CLOUD, to the MANNA, QUAILS, &c. a fample of the MANNA remained to future generations; and they were directed to relate what they faw to their children.

5thly, THE whole People were witheffes to the framing and building of the Ark, and Tabernacle, they were all contributors to it, they faw the CLOUD fill, and reft upon, it, and they affifted at the Services performed there; and, to commemorate this, as well as their fojourning in tents in the Wildernefs, the annual Feast of TABERNACLES was appointed, which, in fucceeding years, they were to explain to their Children.

As thefe things were abfolutely fufficient to fatisfy the children of I/rael, then in being, touching the authority and obligation of this  $L_{AW}$ , feveral things were added to enforce the obfervance, and to preferve the memory and evidence of what was to be obferved.

If, THE LAW was by Moses, at the command of God, put into Writing, for the greater certainty, as well as all the directions for making the ARK, the CHERUBIM, the TABERNACLE, the Priefts GARMENTS, Ec. and all the Rules of GOVERNMENT, JUDICA-TURE, Ec. with every other circumflance revealed, for directing the faith and the conduct of the Nation.

2dly, THIS LAW was to be preferved, perufed, and attended to, in the moft careful manner; The Priefls, who were to judge in queftions relating to it, muft be well verfed in it; The King, who was to rule over the Nation, was to write out a Copy of it for himfelf, and to perufe it continually; And the People were to write out paffages of it, and to wear them, by way of Signs, upon-their Hands, and of Frontlets between their Eyes, and to write them upon the pofts of their doors, &c. And they were to teach their children the moft notable parts of it, and particularly to inftruct them in the miracles attending the deliverance from Eg vpt, lay down, and as they rofe up, &c.

3 dly, BESIDES the authority that promulgated the LAW, there was a folemn COVENANT and Agreement between God and the people, whereby the people became bound to keep, preferve, and observe this LAW, and all that was contained in it; and God became bound to be the God of the Ifraelitifb People, to protect, and prosper them: and this COVENANT, towards the end of their sojourning in the wilderness, was folemnly renewed.

4thly, THE particulars of this COVENANT, upon God's part, were to give the People the good land of Canaan, a land flowing with milk and honey, to preferve and protect them in it, to give them perpetual indurance, and victory over their and his enemies, to profper them in all their labours, to give them the increase of their fields, and flocks, and to make them a great, a happy, and a flourishing people, on condition that they kept and obeyed his LAW.

sthly, THE particulars on the part of the People, were to ferve Jehovah, and no other God, in the way directed by the LAW, to preferve, obferve, and obey, the LAW carefully and exactly, and if they failed or transfereffed, to fubmit and confent to the fevere fanction of the LAW and COVENANT, which, in many inflances was, to individuals transferffing, death (to be cut off from the people) and to the bulk of the People DESTRUCTION, CAPTIVITY, DIS-PERSION, BLINDNESS, MADNESS, &c. befides the forfeiture of all the good promifes.

othly, BESIDES the other bleffings, and preeminences, God was, by fome fpecial visible Symbol of his prefence, to refide continually with the people, first, in the Tabernacle which was made in the wilderness for that end, and, afterwards, in the Temple, whence he was to give judgment and directions, and to answer prayers, and accept of vows.

7thly, THIS COVENANT was also reduced into writing, and was the tenure by which the Ifraelites held the land of Canaan, and on which all their hopes were founded; Wherefore, it must in all generations be confidered by them as a thing of no finall moment.

As God was the head of this STATE, and as the people held immediately their land of him, fo he made feveral Regulations for holding that property, that are very remarkable.

1/2, THE Land was by his command divided into twelve lets, one for each Tribe, and they were put in possefilion accordingly, to the exclusion of the tribe of Levi, who for their portion had no more than what attended the fervice of God's house, and some Cities, with Suburbs, dispersed amongst other Tribes.

2d/r, Nor only were the defeendants of each Tribe to enjoy, in exclusion of other Tribes, their own lot, but the particular fields and parcels, within each Tribe, were to remain for ever with the refpective families that first posseffed them, and, on failure of the Issue of the Posseffor, to the nearest of that family: Hence, all lands fold returned at the Jubilee to the Poprietor, or his nearest a-kin; he who had right to avenge blood, might Redeem.

dly, THIS right of Blood, depending upon knowledge of defcent and genealogy, made it abfolutely neceffary for the children of I/rael to keep very exact records and proofs of their defcent, > not to mention the expectation they had of fomething, furprizingly fingular, from the many promifes made to Abraham, Ifaac, and Jacob, that the BLESSING to mankind fhould fpring from their feed; and, in tracing their genealogy, we fee they were very critical, upon their return from Babylon; fo that, before their Records were diffurbed by the Captivity, it could not well be otherways, but that every body of any note amongst the Jews could tell you the name of his Anceftor, who first had the Family-Poffeffion, in the days of Joshua, and how many degrees, and by what defcent, he was removed from him. And as thefe first Poffeffors, purfuant to the cuftom of the Nation, must have been defcribed by their fathers name, 'tis highly probably, they could have quoted by name that Anceftor who faw the miracles in Egypt, who faw the LAW given, who entered into the COVENANT, and who contributed to the fetting up the ARK and TABERNACLE.

4thly, THE very furprizing care taken by the Deity to keep the breed of the Jews pure, and genuine, by the proofs of VIRGINITY, and by the miraculous Waters of JEALOUSY, is a circumftance that merits attention, and will eafily induce a belief that Defcent and Birth was a matter much minded amongft them: And 5thly, THE appointment and observance of the Sabbatical year, and, after the feventh Sabbatical year, a year of JUBILEE, for the general release of debts, lands, &c. is a circumstance of great moment, ment, not only as thefe notable PERIODS were useful towards the eaty computation of time, but as it made enquiry into TITLES, and confequently genealogy, neceflary every fiftieth year; and as the cellation from culture, every feventh year, gave continual occasions for the Deity's dilplaying his power in increasing the Crop of the fixth, purfuant to his promife.

Now, taking these circumstances together under confideration, could any human precaution have provided more means to keep up the memory and evidence of any fact? Could this have been done by human forefight or force? Has any thing like to it ever been in the world befides?

WHAT could tend more to perpetuate the memory of any event, than to deliver a whole People, by publick glorious miracles, from intolerable flavery? To publish a very extraordinary system of Laws immediately from heaven? To put this Law in writing; together with the Covenant for the obeying it? To make the tenure of the poffellions of the felicity of that people depend on the obfervance of this Law? To appoint annual folemnities for keeping the LAW, and the giving of it, in mind? To appoint figns for the hands, and frontlets for theface by way of MEMORANDUMS? To enjoin perpetual private inftruction by the parent to the children? To make the tenure of the Effates depend on the original division of the Land, to men who faw the miracles, and first took possellion, and on the proximity of relation by descent to them? To appoint a return of Lands every fiftieth year, which should give perpetual occasion to canvass those defcents? To order a Sabbath every feventh year for the Land, the lofs of which fhould be fupplied by the preceeding year's increase? And to felect a whole tribe, confifting of many thoufands, to be the Guardians, in fome degree the Judges and the Executors, of this LAW; who were barred from any portion of the land, in common with their brethren, and were contented with the contributions that came from the other tribes, without any fixed portion amongft them? This muft keep up the belief and authority of that LAW amongst the descendants of that People, or nothing could; and if fuch a belief, under all these circumflances, prevailed amongst a people so constituted, that belief could not poffibly proceed from impofture; becaufe the very means provided, for proof of the truth, are fo many checks against any possibility of imposition,

IF any man will fuggest that the LAW of the  $\mathcal{J}e\omega s$  is no more than human invention, and that the Book of the LAW is a forgery, let him fay when it was imposed upon that People, or at what PERIOD it poffibly could have been fo imposed upon them, fo as to gain belief, later than the PERIOD they mention, and under other circumstances than those they relate.

COULD the whole People have been perfuaded, at any one PE-RIOD, by any Impoflor, that they were told feverally by their fathers, and they by theirs, that the LAW was given with fuch circumflances, and under fuch promifes, and threats, if they were not really told fo; or that they, throughout all their generations, had worn certain paffages of the LAW by way of FRONTLETS and SIGNS, if it had not really been fo?

COULD the whole People have been perfuaded to fubmit to the pain of death, upon all the Offences the LAW makes capital, unlefs their fathers had done fo, upon evidence of the authority of that Law?

COULD the whole People have been perfuaded that they had kept exact Genealogies, in order to entitle them to the bleffing, and to their inheritances feverally, unlefs they actually had done to?

COULD the whole People believe that they had kept PASSOVERS, Feafts of TABERNACLES, &c. down from the date of the LAW, commemorative of the great events they relate to, unlefs they had really done fo?

COULD the Children of Ifrael have been imposed on to receive an ARK, and a TABERNACLE, then forged, and a compleat fet of SERVICE and LITURGY, as defeending from Mofes by the direction of God, unless that ARK and that SERVICE had come to them from their Ancestors, as authorised by God?

COULD the whole People have fubmitted to pay TITHE, FIRST-FRUITS, &c. upon any feigned revelation? Or COULD the Tribe of Levi, without divine authority, have fubmitted not only to the being originally without a portion in Ifrael, but to the being incapable of any, in hopes of the contributions of the people; which, however large, when the whole twelve Tribes ferved at the fame Temple, became very feanty, when ten of them withdrew their allegiance from heaven?

COULD ever the * Book of the LAW, if configned to the Levites, and promulgated, have been loft, fo as to give room for new fictions: Or * N. B. The Book of the LAW found in the days of Jolias was the Copy of the CoveNANT in the hand of Moles.

Or could a Beck of the LAW have been forged, if there was none precedent, and put upon the People, as a book that had been delivered to the Levites by Miofes; if no book at all ever was delivered by him to them, what authority could be pretended for fuch a book?

HAD a book been to be forged, in order to be received by the People, could it have contained fo many feandalous reflections and accufations against the People, and fo many fatal threats and predictions concerning them; and, if it had been fo framed, would it have been received as authentick ?

IF the LAW,  $\mathcal{O}c$ . was forged, it must have been before the days of  $\mathcal{D}avid$ ; because by the facred hymns, in his time, the publication of the LAW is celebrated, and the LAW was observed : And yet the time between the entry of Ifrael into the Land, and the reign of  $\mathcal{D}avid$ , being but about four hundred years, is too short a space for forgetting the real manner of that Entry, and forging another to be received by a People, whose genealogy was so fixed, and whose time was reckoned by fuch PERIODS.

IF the Book of the LAW was not forged before the reign of  $\mathcal{D}avid$ , it could not possibly be forged after, unless the whole history of the kingdom, the tabernacle, the temple, and all the facred hymns and prophecies, are looked upon as one compleat fiction. Because the tabernacle, the temple, the æconomy of the kingdom, the facred hymns and all the other Writings, faid to be facred, bear formal relation to the LAW.

But that all thefe things were not fuppofititious, is evident from the anxious zeal that poffessed the  $\mathcal{J}ews$  who returned from the Captivity; from their follicitude to reflore the city, the temple, and the faced fervice; from their strict examination of their genealogies, and ferupulous care to comply with the LAW.

THE fpace between the captivity and the return was fo fhort, that fome who faw the first temple faw alfo the fecond, and many who were themfelves, or at least whose fathers had been. Officers in the first temple, returned to the fervice of the fecond : So that it is utterly impossible that the history, the liturgy, the fervice of the  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , preceding the return, should be a fiction, at least that it should be a fiction, earlier than the return.

AND the flory of this nation, from that PERIOD, falls in fo much with the hiftory of the reft of the world; their facred books have been been fo foon after that translated, and they have been fo famous for the tenacioufness of their LAWS, that there is no possibility of suspecting that their LAW and Hislory was forged later than the return.

AND, if it is granted that the devotions, the precepts, the inftitutions, and rites and ceremonies, of this LAW, and the great lines of their Hiftory are not forged, one needs, as to the prefent confideration, be but little follicitous concerning the accuracy of the Copy of the Books of the LAW, and of the other facred books; and whether there may not have been fome miftakes or interpolations. It is not with one or one hundred words or fentences we have to do; it is with the fyftem of the SACRIFICATURE, and the other religious laws and fervices of the Jews, and with the political effablifhment of their Theocratical government, and the authority for the effablifhment of both, that we have, at prefent, concern.

For if fuch a tyflem of religious fervices and ceremonies was revealed and commanded by God; if, for the greater certainty it was reduced into writing by Mofes, by divine direction; if fuch a model of government was framed, as is manifeftly calculated for keeping up the obfervance of those fervices, and preferving the memory of the inflitution and keeping up the authority of the book wherein it is recorded; and if the nation, to whom this inflitution was delivered, have preferved it accordingly; compleat evidence thence arifes to us of the Divinity of the inflitution, which confirms what has already been deduced from nature, and the hiftory of the world, concerning REVEALED RELIGION, and leads to a demonstrative proof of the truth of the CHRISTIAN RELIGION, to which all the emblematical inflitutions tend, and in which they center.

AND, if one can but be once fatisfied that this people was chofen and conftituted, in a way furprizingly particular, principally for preferving the ORACLES of GOD, the religion revealed by him to men, and the evidence thereof; one fhall have little difficulty to believe that they were reafonably exact in this particular.

ESPECIALLY, if he recollects the abfolute ferupulofity with which they preferve the facred Books, not having dared fince the days of Jefus Chrift, they their difputes with the Chriftians gave them the ftrongeft temptation, to alter a letter, or to infert in the text ufed in their Synagogues there very POINTS, which they have contrived to vary the fignification of the words to ferve their purpofes; they all of of them fay, and most of them believe, these POINTS to be of divideoriginal.

But the matter does not reft fingly upon the prefumption of accuracy and fidelity in the Jews. We have a translation made, near two hundred years before Chrift, into Greek; and, by comparing that Verfion with the Hebrew kept by the Jews, the diversities are not fo many or fo material as to make any difference in the fense and tendency of the whole. They may all have flowed from the ignorance or careleffness of interpreters, and from mistakes and accidents incident to Copyers; and, where there is any diversity, it is easy to judge on which fide the mistake lies, and the error must naturally be imputed to the Translation, which cannot be prefumed to have been handled with fo great care and reverence as the Original.

AND we have, befides, an Hebrew Copy of the Pentateuch kept by the Samaritans, mortal enemies to the Jews, and who would not probably cooperate with them towards any fraud. This Copy, a very few immaterial things excepted, is literally the fame with that of the Jews; and as the Pentateuch contains the very kernel, and the flanding proof of that revelation which supports the Chriftian Religion, it feems to be the direct act of providence for confirming the truth of that important piece of Revelation. That the Cuthians fucceeded the ten tribes, and that they took up fo much of their Religion as had been retained by thefe tribes, after their defection from the houfe of David, and preferved as facred the Pentateuch, which would have been a check upon the Jears, had they falfifyed theirs; And is a confirmation of the truth, as they have not, out of the mouth of enemies, at leaft of fuch as were in no confederacy with them.

A ND the existence of a Copy of the Pentateuch in the hands of the Samaritans, who must have had it from the ten tribes, and they again must have retained it from the days of Jeroboam's revolt, is a proof not only that that book, as it now flands, was extant, and the flandard of the I/raelitifh facred fervice and faith in the days of David and Solomon, but alfo that all the Copies of the Pentateuch were not loft, as is foolifhly fuppofed, in the days of Jostah; this one being then, clearly, amongst the revolted tribes as the rule of the faith and practice of fuch of them as had not bowed their knee to Baal. Befides many thousands that, probably, were in the hands of the Levites, and feattered over Judah and Benjamin; fo that the F  Copy of the LAW found in the temple, in the time of Josiah, was the Copy of the COVENANT in the hand of Moses, as the text afferts, and not the Copy of the Pentateuch.

THESE reflections put the divine authority of the  $\mathcal{J}ewih$  Inflitution beyond all doubt, they fhew it was the indifpenfible duty of the  $\mathcal{J}ews$  to obey and obferve it; and prove demonstrably, that it would be our duty, as well as theirs, to comply with the fame inflitution and obfervances, unlefs thefe fhall appear to have been fuperfeded and changed by the fame divine authority.

AND it is an Event that calls loudly for our attention, that this inflitution, eftablifhed folemnly by God, has ceafed; the temple, chofen for his refidence, has been deftroyed; and his own peculiar Pcople, whofe head and protector he was to have been, and was bound by Covenant to be, have been utterly unpeopled and feattered near 1700 years ago.

To obtain fatisfaction on this head, it is fit to recollect that almost all the  $\mathcal{J}ewifh$  religious fervice confifted in external emblematical acts, rites, and obfervances, which, in themfelves, and but for the inflitution, and what was intended to be reprefented by them, ferved for no good purpofe.

THE Hebrew word translated the LAW, carries not in it, properly, the idea of authority enjoining or commanding, but is taken from a word that fignifies, originally, to demonstrate, to direct, to point out, the way; and all the precepts, commands, statutes, ordinances, and appointments, come promiseuously under that word which we translate LAW.

IT muft be remembred, that throughout all the facred Hebrew writings, as well in the LAW, as in the HISTORY, HYMNS, and PRO-PHECHS, many matters concerning the LAW are declared by the Deity, and fentiments expressed which regulate the understanding, end, and meaning of it.

NOTHING is more diffinct than the feveral Inftitutions, the pofitive, and negative Precepts of the Law, if no more than the outward operation or obfervance is in queffion; but we find that, throughout the SCRIPTURES, and particularly the book of PSALMS, it was not, fingly, the practice of the Precepts, but the meditation on them day. and night, that was the duty and delight of those that feared God; it was their prayer to be made to understand, to be taught them; it was the duty of the Prieft, and the Prince in a particular manner, and and it was the express command of God to Joshua, to meditate in the Law day and night, then should he do wisely.

It is no wonder that the Law required meditation to unravel the true end and meaning of it; fince, to inftance in one particular, the principal Inftitution of it, to wit SACRIFICE, in itfelf had no vertue at all, and it was contrary to common fenfe and reafon it flould have any.

It is not only contrary to common fenfe, that facrifice fhould have any effect towards removing fin, and placating the Deity: But the fame God, who inflituted facrifice, tells over and over again the people, to whom he gave that Inflitution, that he has no pleafure in facrifice, that the blood of goats cannot atone for fin, that their facrifices were ufelefs towards the ends for which they imagined them profitable.

WHAT then must the religious  $\mathcal{J}e\omega s$ , who believed that facifice was of divine inftitution, who believed at the fame time that it was of no effect towards pardoning fin and procuring favour, and who were bound to meditate on the depths, the hidden things of the Law, cenclude? And what must we conclude who believe as they did? Can we conclude otherways than that this uncouth, unnatural, obfervance, unprofitable and ineffectual in itfelf, was appointed to commemorate or point out fomething, emblematically, that the Deity was defirous to have pointed out and kept in mind?

As one great end of the religious inftitution, and of the frame of the common-wealth of the  $\mathcal{J}e\varpi s$ , was to keep up perpetually the ordinance of SACRIFICATURE; another great end was to preferve, with proper evidence and authority, all the revelations and providences of God, recorded by Mofes and the other infpired Writers.

W E know, then, certainly from the revelation made by God and preferved by the  $\beta ews$ ;

THAT God was to be merciful to man; that he promised The feed of the woman should bruise the head of the serpent, and that the seed of the serpent should bruise his heel:

THAT SACRIFICE was coeval with this revelation, or near it; Abel factificed acceptably:

THAT blood-fhed was deemed holy; and fprinkling that blood the mean, and outward fymbol, of making every thing on which it was fprinkled, the Prieft, the Altar, the Ark, &c. holy:

THAT, when God first declared his purpose of felecting Abraham and his family, and made a COVENANT with him to multiply his feed

as the stars of heaven, and to give them the land of Cansan, he, at the fame time, and with the fame breath, declared that, in his feed all the families of the earth should be bleffed.

THAT the fame declaration was often repeated to Abraham, and to his fucceffors Ifaac and Jacob, which became the foundation of the hopes and expectations of their defeendants; made them carefully preferve their genealogies; and greatly value themfelves on being of the feed of those men, of whose feed should come THAT wherein all the families of the earth should be bleffed.

THAT the first part of the COVENANT or Promife was literally, and in a very marvellous manner, fulfilled; The Ifraelites were miraculously put, and kept in possession of the land of Canaan; But, whils they staid there, the second part was not performed, nor will they admit that it is to this hour performed:

THAT the' this fecond part was not performed, whilft the Nation remained in possellion of the first part of the promise, yet it was perpetually kept in view, and fresh hopes, by repeated promises, given of the same blessing under very extraordinary descriptions.

THE Sceptre was not to depart from Judah until Shilo came, and to him was to be the gathering of people.

THE Throne was to be eftablished with the feed of David for ever; the Covenant was established with him; and of this SEED of his, fuch marvellous things spoken, as do not agree to any of his carnal fuccess. or to any meer man.

THIS Son of David goes under the name of the Anointed of the Lord, and this anointed one is faid to be also the Son of God, the King Anointed on the holy hill of Sion. I will declare the decree, the Lord bath faid unto me, Thou art my fon, this day have I begotten thee.

A l'irgin was to conceive and to bring forth a fon, whofe name was to be Emanuel. A new thing was to happen in the earth, a woman was to compass a man, Jer. xxxi. 22.

To the houfe of Ifrael a Child was to be born, to them a for was given, the government was to be on his fhoulder: and his name was to be called Wonderful, Counfellor, The Mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there was to be no end, upon the throne of David, &c. If. ix. 7.

A

A rod was to come forth of the stem of Jesse, which should stand for an ensign to the people, and to which all the Gentiles should seek, whose rest was to be glorious.

NUMEROUS are the promifes and predictions of peace and falvation, to come not only to the fews, but to all nations, by a mighty CONQUEROR, a great PRINCE, who is to fit on the throne of David; who is called David [i. e. the beloved] in prophecies delivered hundreds of years after king David's death; who was to rule in peace, to lead, and to defend, his people; who is called The righteoufnefs, The holinefs, The falvation of Jehovah, The righteous fervant of the Lord, who is to deliver Ifrael from their fins; who is to be a Light, is to be Salvation to the Gentiles; who is given for a Covenant to the people, who is to reflore peace and joy to Mankind; a fountain is to be opened to the houfe of David, and to the inhabitants of ferufalem, for fin, and for uncleannefs.

The Righteous Servant of the Lord is to fuffer for Mankind, for the fins of the people; he is to bear their iniquities, to be bruifed, for them; to be unjufily condemned in judgment, and to fuffer death, to make his body an offering for fin: but he was to divide a portion with the great, &c. becaufe he had exposed his body unto death, and he was numbred with the tranfgreffors, and made intercession for the tranfgreffors.

THIS extraordinary perfon, who was to do those wondrous things, is described as sitting on the right hand of God; as the fellow of God, against whom the sword was to be employed to smith him; and the people were, at last, to look upon him whom they had pierced; and to mourn for him as one mourneth for his eldest son: But this was not to be till the spirit of praser and supplication should be poured out on the house of David, and on the inhabitants of service.

- Meffiab the anointed one, the Prince was to be cut off, at a determined period, but not for himself.

AND many, and various, predictions are feattered every where throughout the facred Writings, that the  $\mathcal{J}ews$  fhall be rejected, and the Gentiles called to the fervice of God, and to enjoy the bleffings promifed to Ifrael.

THESE feveral, wonderful, predictions and promifes, with many more of the fame kind, could not poffibly be overlooked by the Jews; or thought to relate to any thing but the great, the important, branch of the original COVENANT with Abraham, not performed when the Nation was in poffeffion of the land, to wit, that in his feed all the nations nations of the earth were to be bleffed. This was too confiderable a part of the Covenant to be overlooked, or to remain unperformed; And it is no wonder that the  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , from it, and from these feveral predictions, promifes, and declarations, that related to it, expected with confidence that bleffing to all nations in the MESSIAH, who was to be of the feed of David.

TAKING, then, all thefe predictions and promifes together, and joining them with the original COVENANT made with Abraham, it is as clear as the fun's light, that the extraordinary perfon promifed, and deferibed to be the fon of David, and the fon of God, the anointed one, the beloved, was the feed promifed to Abraham, in whom all the nations of the earth were to be bleffed.

A N D, therefore, the  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , who believed the SCRIPTURE to be infallible truth, were infuperably determined to believe this extraordinary perfon, whom they call the MESSIAH, was to come; and we, who believe the fame SCRIPTURE to be the word of God, muft neceffailly conclude that he either is come, or is to come; or elfe we muft admit that God has given his authority to the belief of a falfehood, which is monftroufly abfurd.

THE Jews may value themfelves as much as they pleafe on their being the favourite people, and may flatter themfelves in the opinion that the MESSIAS was intended peculiarly for them, and that the Cove-NANT with Abraham, and the whole ftructure of, and divine providence about, their law and nation, was meant only, and primarily, for them: But we, of the Nations, beg leave to differ with them, and to infift that, in the feed of Abraham all the Nations of the earth, and amongft them we, were to be bleffed. 'That their MESSIAS was to be the Light of the Nations; that he was given for a COVENANT to all people; and that he was to bring falvation to all men.

AND we must observe, that all that part of the COVENANT that regarded the land of Canaan, and the Jewish people in particular, was conditional, forfeitable upon breach of COVENANT by the Jews; and actually forfeited, as they themfelves must own, and as their own Scriptures testify: Whereas the promise of bleffing to the Nations, in the feed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, is absolute, and unconditional, and believed necessfarily to be performed, whatever came of the Jewish law and common-wealth.

THE City and Government of the  $\mathcal{J}e\omega s$  is now deftroyed, and diffolved; they are unpeopled, as we may fay, and remain featured up up and down the face of the earth; their fyftem of religious fervice is now no more practifed, nor practicable; no man can trace his defcent from Aaron, fo no man amongft them can lawfully fhed blood; nor can any prove his defcent from David, fo none can know the MESSIAH by his pedegree, were he yet to come. It is near 1700 Years fince the temple, to which the Meffenger of the Covenant was to come, is deftroyed utterly; And yet the Jews will neither admit that the MESSIAS is come, nor that their Scripture is falfe, which is very extraordinary.

It was equally the Intereft of the Nations, as of the  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , to have looked out for the advent of the MESSIAS; but they did not know what concern they had in that event, and therefore could not be follicitous about it. The  $\mathcal{J}ews$  were juftly follicitous about it, and had all the marks, and tokens, given by infallible Revelation, by which to know it; but, in purfuance to the blindnefs predicted to themfelves, they did not fee it.

IT is an amazing providence that the  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , who looked for the MESSIAH, did not fee or receive him when he came; and that the Gentiles, who knew little, and had no expectation of him, faw and received him, and in him the bleffing: This is furprizing, but it did not happen by chance, it was predicted by Mofes and the Prophets.

Daniel had fixed a determined Time for the Advent of the MES-SIAH; the whole Nation knew it, and expected him, about the time he came; their expectations ran fo high, that the Confidence foundded upon them pulled on their ruin, and final deftruction. The MESSIAS came when they expected him, and yet they knew him fo little, that they became his Executioners, and put him to death as a blafphemer.

IN Jacob's bleffing to Judah, or rather prophecy concerning him, the Scepter was not to depart from Judah, nor the Lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh came; and all the Jews, by Shiloh, underftood the MESSIAS.

IN Daniel's Prophecy the advent of the MESSIAH, who is to be cut off, is to be followed by the utter defiruction of the City, the temple, the law, the commonwealth, of the Jews.

THO' the jews were to blind as not to fee the MESSIAS when he came, but, inflead of receiving him, to cut him off; It is aftonifhing that, when they had cut him off, when they faw their city, their temple.

temple, their common wealth, and their holy fervice, at an end, they didnot fee their millake, and look to him whom they had pierced.

IF the Scepter was not to depart from Judah till Shiloh came, it is a neverflary confequence that, if the Scepter is actually departed; Shiloh muft certainly be come.

AT the time predicted, and when the Yews expected the MES-SIAH, a Man of the tribe of Judah, and family of David, appeared in Judea, preaching repentance and remission of fins : He declared he was the MESSIAS, the fon of God, fent to fave Mankind ; and, as an evidence of his Miffion, wrought in the fight of the people great numbers of amazing miracles; He opened the eyes of the blind, and the ears of the deaf, he reftored speech to the dumb, and health to multitudes of fick perfons by his fingle fiat; He faid he came to fulfill, and put an end to, the Law, to die for the fins of mankind; He taught as never man taught : But, being in a form too humble and lowly for the Expectations of the Jews, he was arraigned of high treafon against the Roman power, and of high treafon against the head of the Jewish commonwealth, that is Blasphemy; was tryed, convicted upon his own acknowledgment that he was the fon of God, and ignominioufly crucified, and buried: And tho' he did not ufe his Divine power to avoid that death, which he faid he was to undergo, yet he ever had that power to confirm his own promife that he was to rife again the third day; he rofe, inftructed the Disciples he had elected, and afcended into heaven, having first promifed to fend the HOLY SPIRIT, the COMFORTER, who was accordingly fent, and filled the Apostles, and Disciples.

As the Jews, that is the High Priest and the Nation, not knowing this Perfon, put him to death for pretending to be the Messian, it is but natural to think they would for fome time perfift in their opinion, and therefore they made use of all means to justify their own opinion and conduct, to weaken his Credit, to make him pase upon the world for an Impostor, and to oppose the propagation of his doctrine.

As the heathen world was at that time deep funk in ignorance and fuperfition, and, where Superfition did not prevail, ftrongly byaffed to Atheifin, the philofophy of Epicurus; it was againft all probability that the furprizing, the felf-denying, doctrine of Jefus fhould prevail.

N E-

NEVERTHELESS in less than 300 years, in spite of the fierce opposition of the Jews, in spite of the many Perfecutions from the Roman Emperors, who were then Lords of the whole known earth, in fpite of the ignorance and weaknefs of, the first followers of Ckrist, the Apoffles, who were chosen of the loweft rank of the pcople, the doctrine of that crucified Jefus fo far prevailed, as to become the religion of the whole known world, (the Jews excepted:) fuch influence had the teaching of the HOLY SPIRIT, and the Miracles wrought.

IF any man shall wantonly think fit to call in question (notwithftanding the evidence) that miracles were wrought, and fhall aver that none were performed; let him confider whether, on that Supposition, it is not a miracle, and evidence of Divine power beyond all cavilling. that this doctrine, in the hands of fuch men, against fuch opposition, prevailed over mankind in fo fhort a space, without the assistance of any power but the power of God, and the proofs brought from the Scriptures,

THE doctrine taught by the followers of Jefus was that he was the Son of God, the promifed MESSIAS; that he came, purfuant to the COVENANT of GRACE, to fhed his blood for the remiffion of Sins; that pardon and grace was thereby to be had; that the LAW ferved only to point him out, and defcribe him; and that the blood of Sacrifices were but emblems, and types, of his blood; who, having therein washed mankind from their fins, was for ever to make interceffion for fuch as believed, and expected mercy.

THIS doctrine prevailed early over fuch of the Jews as waited humbly for the Salvation of God, and whofe notions were not totally debauched; It prevailed over fuch of the Gentiles as retained notions of atonement by blood; but it made no progrefs among the hardned Jews who crucified their MESSIAH, who by all arts whatever except falfifying the text of their facred Books, endeavoured to fliffe the new doctrine, and keep their own in countenance; tho' it is highly aftonishing it should not have prevailed over them, when their city and temple were rafed, and when it became the light of the Gentile world.

IT is easy, by running over the many typical and prophetical predictions in the LAW and the PROPHETS, and shewing the harmony and accomplishment in the Person of Jesus, to heighten the demonftration of the truth of the Christian Religion,' and the amazement'at the the furprizing hardnefs of the Jews; but, postponing that for a little, can any man, from what has been already stated, doubt that the Christian Religion is that pointed out by the Judaick dispensation, and that it is Divine, unless he admit that the Judaick dispensation is a pure forgery, or that the Deity can fail in fulfilling his Promises?

OR, can any man reflect on the blindness and obstinacy of the Jews in shutting out the light which show amongst themselves, and which from them only show out to the reft of the world, without observing the immediate singer of God in this association shows which happed, being predicted?

CONSIDERING with due attention these circumstances, it is impossible not to perceive skill, much greater than human contrivance, as well as power Divine, in preparing and furnishing evidence for the truth of the Chrissian Religion; or, which is the fame thing, the Doctrine of pardon and mercy through the blood of Christ.

THIS doctrine, not refulting from nature or reason, is not capable of proof à Priori, or from reason, and therefore must depend on evidence external, as other matters of fact do.

MIRACLES, or the immediate interposition of Almighty Power controuling the common course of nature, may be proof of revelation; but the proof of those miracles may decay, by length of time, and by degrees, unless some very extraordinary mean is used by the Deity to preferve the proof of such Miracles.

PREDICTION of natural events that do not depend upon a certain, unchanging, course of nature is, when the event happens, proof that the Prophet had his Prediction from heaven.

PREDICTION of miraculous or fupernatural events, when thefe events happen, is the higheft evidence of the Intervention of the Deity; and, if one can be certain that the event was predicted and accordingly hapned, no doubt at all can remain the Prediction and the Event were both from God; and, fuppoling fuch a thing to have hapned for the confirmation of any doctrine, the only requifite to perpetuate that proof to posterity would be to provide fuch a history of the prediction and accomplishment, as could not, juffly; be fuspected, or called in queftion.

THE chief caules for denying affent to the truth of facts recorded in hiftory are,

THAT the Hiftorian may have been ill informed, and may have taken what he wrote without inflicient evidence;

Тнат

THAT the Hiftorian may be fingle, unfupported by any other collateral evidence, in which cafe his veracity may be queflioned; and,

THAT the Hiftory, in length of time, may be vitiated, interpolated, or altered, to be accommodated to prevailing notions or opinions.

Now, if the facred Inflitution, and civil Oeconomy, of the feed of Abraham is confidered as calculated to receive, to preferve, and to communicate, the revelation of the good will of God to Man, it furnifhes a teftimony to that truth fuperior to all doubt, and to any other evidence that ever fupported a matter of fast.

THE Historian could not be deceived; the miracles related were wrought in his and in the fight of the whole people, and many of them not fingle acts, but reiterated, fome repeated for forty years together.

THE Hiftorian cannot be looked upon to be fingle; (I confider the whole People as joint hiftorians attefting the truth of Mofes's relations) what he relates was done in the fight of many hundreds of thoufands; they all agree the relation to be fact; they receive his account of it, hold it certain and facred; obferve the precepts; expect the promifes; fubmit to the fanction; and hold their whole land, the pofferfion of each individual, and the offices in the Church and State, by that tenure.

THE fulpicion of any alteration, or interpolation, to promote any favourite point or opinion, is abfolutely excluded by the religious reverence had, at all times, for the facted Book; by the many reproaches every where to be met with therein against the Jews, which their ferupulofity prevented their meddling with ; and by the many predictions not only of those mischiefs to the Nation, which hapned to them before the facred Book went out of their own hands, and language, into other hands, and languages, but of those mischiefs alfo which hapned, fome hundreds of years after the feriptures were published in foreign languages, and continue to happen at this day; I mean, their rejecting the MESSIAH, and putting him to death, the fubverfion of the flate and temple, and their difperfion, blindnefs, and obftinacy: for I take it to be an event of all others the most furprizing, and the leaft to be accounted for from the nature of things, That the Jews should continue under such circumstances, and in fuch numbers as they are, firm even to death in the belief of their G 2 Scriptures,

H A D the nation of the Jews seen in Jefus the MESSIAH; and submitted to him, the Scriptures would not have been fulfilled.

HAD they, after his death, univerfally acknowledged him, asmany individuals of the nation did, they, as these individuals did, laying afide all national distinctions, would have been funk and loss in the general mass of Christians; and we should have had no more than an historical account of their having once existed, as we have of the Athenians, Spartans, Samnites, &c.

HAD this been the cafe; the authority of the facred Book would have refted folely on itfelf; there would not have been one living witnefs to prove its authenticknefs, or to prevent the fufpicion that it was forged, as the Fragments of the book of Enoch, the Testaments of the twelve Patriarchs, the Sybilline Oracles, and multitudes of other pious cheats, most certainly were.

O R had the Jewisb Nation maintained its land; preferved its government, and turned Christian with the reft of the World, the books they should then exhibit as facred would not be altogether free from fuspicion: Those, who combat their truth, as they stand, would not fail to suggest that passages had been accommodated to the, then, prefent belief of the Nation, and that the whole might be a forgery to introduce a belief, which some impostors of that Nation had a mind to fet up.

Bur, as the Jewish Nation have every rejected, and do ftill continue to reject, with the utmost horror and detestation, the belief of those truths which their own books are the chief evidence of, they are the most unexceptionable witness that the heart or head of the most forupulous man could wish for; it being absolutely impossible that they can concur in any fraud or fiction for the support of that doctrine which they utterly abominate.

To reflect a little, then, on the evidence of this Revelation: Here is a People chofen in the loins, as one may fay, of their parents, to be, as the Deity is pleafed to declare, witneffes for him; formed into a very great and a very peculiar people; diffinguifhed by particular inflitutions, and by the immediate hand of God kept diffinct from all the nations of the Earth; receiving directly from God revelations, inflitutions, predictive and emblematical, and many oracular declarations; tions; preferved by the peculiar providence of God in poffession of their land, and in the practice of those prophetical inflitutions for above 1500 years; believing that those predictions described an event, which was at hand, big with the greatest blessions to them, and to the whole universe, and looking out hourly for the accomplishment.

But when that great event happens, this fingular people, obflinately blind, refufing to fee it, and rejecting the benefit of it; not by accident, but in purluance of many predictions in their own facred book; and thereby remaining the irreproachable witneffes of the truth of the facred Revelation, which from the beginning they were chosen to bear evidence of.

NOR is their continuing; with that qualification of witneffes, at this day lefs marvellous, or lefs the immediate act of God, than their prefervation in their land, before the advent of the Meffiah, formerly was.

WHO can with attention, and without prejudice, view the contrivance, the skill, the interpolition of the finger of God, for formany ages, to provide, prepare, and preferve, fo furprizing, and fo unexceptionable, a proof for his revelation of grace to mankind, and at the fame time fuffer himfelf to doubt whether all this is not impofture, purely, becaufe God has been pleafed to reveal fome things that do not conform to well to his apprehensions; tho' he knows full wellthat his understanding is, almost in every thing, fcanty and weak?

Who can doubt that, if God intended to reveal peace and mercy to mankind, he would make the evidence of that revelation firong and permanent?

AND who can fee the evidence and believe without adoring, and determining to ferve, that beneficent Being, who has provided fuch evidence of his grace for the comfort, direction, and encouragement, of mankind, to purfue their duty, and to arrive at felicity?

EARLY, we faw man undone, unlefs there was fome hidden method in referve with the Deity for abolifhing his fin; and in a defperate ftate, if hope was not created, by revealing that method, which to man muft naturally be unknown.

WE faw, alfo, that mankind had hopes from the earlieft times; that these hopes had in them fome connection with the shedding of blood; and, from the universality of the hope of pardon, on that principle, we concluded it highly probable that these hopes were given, and that mean pointed out by the Deity; both the one and the the other being not only without any countenance from, but even as fome men have feemed to understand them, contrary to reason.

W E faw that if these hopes, and the mean used, were from God, there must be some standing evidence, provided by the Deity, for producing in man belies in his mercy, and the just consequences of that belies.

AND, now, we fee, in fact, that fuch evidence is provided, which juftifies the hopes and the practice of the ancient world, at the fame time that it receives confirmation from them; and fhews clearly that this REVELATION was given from the beginning, and that the Law of Mofes is a REPUBLICATION of it.

THIS then being, undeniably, the cafe; how abfurd and pernicious muft the fentiments and conduct be of thefe unlearned, but conceited, men who, without examining nature or revelation carefully, prefume to decide magifterially againft REVEALED RELIGION; and employ all the talents, the bountiful God of Nature has beflowed upon them, not to examine and enquire into, but to difcredit and defeat, the evidence that he has, with fuch infinite care, provided; and thereby harden themfelves, and all fuch whofe hearts and heads are turned like theirs, in falfe and impious notions?

Tindal (and all who have thought, before or after him, as he does) will have the law of NATURE, that is the light of NATURE, a perfect rule for men's actions; and who doubts this? He fays this light is abfolutely fufficient to guide men in their conduct towards God, and towards one another; and this is no doubt alfo true; but, then, he concludes that this light of NATURE is, by itfelf, fufficient in our prefent flate to lead us comfortably through this life to happinefs in the next: But here he errs, manifeftly, either from want of attention to truths which he admits, or from building on falfe principles, which, without due examination, he has adopted.

THAT the light of NATURE, with the influctions the first man had, was fufficient to guide him before he finned, is certain; and that the fame light, after committing that fin, was a fufficient monitor against committing more, may also be true: But how was this first Man to find out, that the first fin he committed was to be pardoned, if that God, against whom he finned, had not told him fo much? Is there any thing in NATURE to let a man know, certainly, that the infinite, the perfect, the immutable, justice of God will pardon, connive or wink at, fin, the transgression of the eternal law of order, in fetting fetting up another fovereign, without fome caufe, motive or confideration, of infinite moment to determine the Deity fo to do? Or can NATURE find out that there was truly the interpolition of fuch a caufe?

MR. Tindal would avoid this difficulty by fuppofing that the light of NATURE teaches man that God is merciful, and that he will pardon, upon repentance, and a purpofe of amendment; and, if this was true, his argument would go pretty far: but this is most certainly not true; the Deift borrows, in this, an article from RevEALED RELIGION, which, by afcribing to the light of NATURE, he would make use of to overthrow that very Religion that discovered it.

The light of NATURE flews the God of nature to be bountiful, good, benign, clement, beneficent and merciful, if the Idea is carried no further than a difposition not to hurt, and to relieve, proper objects of relief; but the light of NATURE does in no way flew that this perfect being is merciful to finners, or that his clemency or beneficence can have for its object the offender against immutable justice. The ideas of indignation against fin, and punishment of trespass, are to neceffarily joined with, and infeparable from, the idea of infinite, perfect, justice, that the light of NATURE, without destroying the idea of the effential justice of God, or without discovering what, without REVELATION, it could not discover, that justice was, by the interposition of an atonement of infinite confideration, to be fatisfied, could not possibly frame to itself any notion that mercy was to take place, or that repentance, and purpose of amendment, were to be of any moment.

REVELATION, indeed, has altered the cafe; it has deferibed God as merciful, long-fuffering, patient, and pardoning transgreffion, upon repentance: But, then, it has reconciled that difcovery to the dictates of nature, which spoke just the reverse, by intimating that an atonement has, by infinite mercy, been found out to fatisfy immutable, effential, justice.

THUS do weak, prefumptuous, men miflead themfelves, to lull their confeience, that glimple of the light of nature, afleep; and, to prevent the trouble it must give them, they lay hold of a principle difcovered, and proved, only, by REVELATION; but, becaufe they would not be beholden to REVELATION for it, they boldly, and falfely, averr it is deducible from REASON; and then make use of it to fupport an Hypothesis, of their own framing, that shall overturn.

that.

that REVELATION, from which the fupport to their Hypothefis is fought.

DEISM is not tenible without fuppofing remiffion of fin to be neceffarily confequent upon repentance, and this to be difcoverable by the light of NATURE. Remiffion does not appear from NATURE to be the confequence of repentance, but rather the contrary; the difcovery and proof of this proposition is owing folely to Revelation; and yet there are men, who would be thought wife and honeft, who would be thought to believe the proposition, and yet make it the fludy of their lives to overthrow the evidence on which it is built.

I r would be very happy if these Gentlemen, who pique themselves fo much on the fludy, the knowledge, the light of NATURE, entered a little more into the confideration of themfelves, and of those things they fo much pretend to know, and to admire; and befowed but half the time, they take to direct others, in finding out their own condition, and what they have to hope or fear : Did they but look at their own cafe, they fhould be lefs wanton, lefs prefumptuous.

WHAT man is there who, entring into himfelf, and comparing honeftly what he now is with what man originally was, and ought to have continued, does not fee the corruption, the mifery, the helpleffnefs, of his own condition? If the depravity or violence of his appetites, his lufts, or his passions, have drawn him to commit any of the more notorious crimes that diffurb fociety, or deftroy his neighbour, conficience generally interpofes, and the fting is felt, till the depraved wretch harden himfelf by some false excuse, or by some other criminal purfuit, draw away his attention from the fore.

BUT, fuppofing a man, from the happy conftitution with which he was born, from the advantage of a good education, to form his fentiments; or, from the kind conduct of God's providence, free from those großer offences that fall under the centure and diffaste of all honeft men: Can he recollect that he is the creature of the infinitely perfect Being, that the great, the chief, end of giving him all those intellectual faculties, that diffinguish him from the reft of the creation, was to contemplate the power, the wifdom, the goodnefs, of God in his works, and in his providence, and to admire, adore, and ferve, this fource of goodnefs, power, wifdom, and perfection; that his diftinguishing felicity lay in purfuing his duty, in answering the ends for which those intellectual faculties were given; that a tribute of praife, of acknowledgment, and of thankfulnefs, is due to the God

God of nature, who has mercifully and beneficently framed the heart of man, to that the very act of paying this tribute is neceffarily attended with the most perfect, pure joy, ferenity and fatisfaction, that the human mind is capable of feeling; I fay, can he recollect thefe things, and at the fame time be confeious that he feldom, if ever, employs the talents given him to the end for which they were given; that it is not the occupation of his mind, or the joy of his heart, to contemplate or acknowledge the divine wifdom, and goodnefs; that the supreme good is not only not the object of the meditation of his mind, or of the purfuit of his heart, but that these faculties, and difpolitions, bountifully given for those honourable and bleffed ends, are monftroufly mifapplied to the purfuit of fleeting, perifhing, if not wicked, pleafures; that the foul is fo knit to, and bewitched with, those mean, unmanly, unreasonable enjoyments, which end in smoke, if not in forrow; that there is no tafte left for those fublime, permanent, pleafures, for which it was created ; and that, in place of using the very refuse of one's time, what is over and above the purfuit and enjoyment of those vain comforts, to the chief end for which time was indulged, the thought of the leaft communication with the Creator is to painful, that all amufements, how foolifh or infignificant foever, are anxioufly fought after to murder time, and to divert, as 'tis called, from that exercise of the foul, and heart, wherein confists his indifpenfable duty, and his highest felicity; without perceiving that he is guilty of high-treason against the God of NATURE, that he is revolted from him, and has substituted in his place, and made choice of, his creatures for the object of his defires, and of his purfuits; that they are become his mafters, who hold him in captivity; and he their flave, fo chained to their drudgery, that he has no more capacity left to return to the enjoyment of his Maker, and to relifh the pleafures that are with him for evermore; without dreading the just vengeance of the Omnipotent which may reach him here, and must reach him, unlefs reconciliation intervene, in the life to come ; whither, he knows, the pleafures and the amufements of this life cannot follow him.

WHOEVER makes these reflections, and every living foul must, who will enter into himself and think feriously, can have no other question to exercise his mind with, but, What shall he do to be faved ? And is any accident should bring to his ears that blessed piece of intelligence, that there is a way still open to the favour of God, and means provided for the pardon of fin, it is impossible the tidings should not

roufe the whole of his Attention, and employ the utmost of his difgence to difcover the truth of fo acceptable news; which, if found to be the very will and revelation of God, must meet with the most joyful and thankful acceptance.

But if men will not look fo far into themfelves, as to fee and feel their miferable condition; if they are fo well contented with the pleafure they enjoy, or have in view, that they look for none other; or if their immerfion in fenfual fatisfactions prevents their entertaining those honourable notions of the Deity, and of his fervice, that are contradictory to their prefent purfuits and scheme of life; it is no wonder they should not listen with attention to a piece of information, which, if true, breaks in upon their prefent happines, fours all their pleasures, and promises in exchange, an enjoyment for which they have no tafte.

MEN, fo minded, cannot poffibly receive the GOSPEL, or failtoforge reafons against it; whilst those who fensibly feel the want, must with the greatest earness with they may, upon due examination, find it true.

THE GOSPEL is an infallible CURE, a glorious MEDICINE, tho' of a bitter relifh to many palates, for the moft obflinate, the moft dangerous difeafe. A MEDICINE coveted, however, notwithflanding its harfhnefs, and greedily fwallowed by thofe who feel the anguifh of the difeafe, or dread the danger; but naufeated and rejected by thofe who are fenfible of no ailment, and believe themfelves to be in health. It is one of the hardeft things in the world, to perfuade Madmen to come under the regimen neceffary for their cure, becaufe it is impoflible to convince them they are mad; a madman, however, can by violence be compelled to the taking of medicine, but the GOSPEL muft be fought after, and taken voluntarily, and wifhfully, before it can do any good.

THE whole want no PHYSICIAN, and those who think themselves to, believe they want none. It is otherwise with the fick, who in proportion as they feel agony, are impatient, and earnest for relief.

THEY begin at the wrong end, who, to perfuade a DEIST to receive the GOSPEL, attempt first to prove the excellence and infallibility of it: If he is fatisfied, he has no occasion for it, he cannot be brought to examine fufficiently, and to weigh the proof. Ccnvince a man, who diflikes the only medicine that can cure him, that he

he is dangeroufly ill, he will hear you patiently on the fubject of the remedy, and fubmit to make use of it, be it ever so unpalatable; if you cannot convince him that he ftands in need of it, he is incurable.

As fome men are fo thoroughly corrupted, as to like the wretched ftate in which they are, better than that, in the poffeffion whereof the higheft felicity their nature is capable of confifts; they are fo weak, and at the fame time fo conceited, as to think they can perfuade others, who do feel this mifery, and pant after relief, that they are in perfect health, and want no remedy; and, by doing fo, expofe themfelves to the pity, if not to the indignation, of those who are confcious of their own mifery; and with joy hope for relief from means that these men endeavour to traduce, and abuse.

THE whole of the DEIST's fcheme is, as he imagines, built upon REASON, and fo far as right reafon goes, the CHRISTIAN agrees with him; but the difference between them is this, The DEIST maintains, that nothing is to be admitted but what he can affign a proper reafon for, or, in other words, what falls in with the ideas which he has, or has made for himfelf; whereas the humble CHRISTIAN, believes that there are things of which he neither has, nor can have, adequate ideas; that things may be true, tho' he does not juftly know how, or why, they are fo; and that, for the reality and truth of fuch things as do not depend upon reason, or fall within his knowledge, he must depend upon such evidence as is sufficient to induce the belief of any matter of fact.

WHEN one confiders how little we know of matter which we fee, feel, and tafte, and on which we have tried fo many thousand EXPERIMENTS; how undeniably every fyftem, forged by the wit and industry of the greatest GENIUSES, and believed for some time, has been overthrown by fucceeding EXPERIMENTS; what amazing, nay feemingly contradictory effects, the CHYMIST every day fees produced in his Laboratory, by very fimple mixtures; and how certain we are, that hitherto we, from our reafon, have difcovered nothing of the first principles of MOTION, and that MECHANISM which fupports our felves and this fyftem; when one recollects that we know nothing at all of the nature of our own foul, and are incapable of framing any idea of it, or of any other fpirit; and when one reflects how infinitely above our comprehension the Deity must be; it is impoffible not to be aftonished at the prefumptuous folly of those men H<sub>2</sub> who would fet up their knowledge for the ftandard, and teft, of every thing, divine and human; who by it would define the nature, and manner of exiftence, of the incomprehenfible Deity; who by it,would determine and regulate H1s views, H1s defigns, H1s actions; and who, by it, take upon them to judge of the wildom and juffice of H1s defigns and actions, contrary to what HE has declared about them; tho' it is demonsfratively certain, that they cannot be fure they know the caufes of, or motives to those defigns or actions.

RIDICULOUS as this fond conceit of the fufficiency of REASON and human KNOWLEDGE is, INFIDELITY finds in it one of its chief fupports. Many facts are related, many things are revealed, that do not quadrate with the notions men have framed to themfelves, which they call knowledge. Each of thefe creates an objection, which the Objector, taking to be unanfwerable, does not give himfelf the trouble to look for an anfwer to; and the fame weight is laid upon the Point's being inconfiftent with his notions, or not accountable for by his knowledge, as if it was a manifeft contradiction to right reafon: though every one muft fee the difference between a contradiction in terms, an abfolute inconfiftency in the thing itfelf, and an inconfiftency between a thing, and the notions a man has framed on that fubject, or even the incapacity of framing a diffinct notion of the thing itfelf.

VANITY, felfifhnefs, an affectation of gaining more knowledge than the Creator thought fit to allow, was the caufe of the ruin of our first parents; and a false, prefumptuous opinion, of the fufficiency and extent of the knowledge their descendants are possessed of, is the cause of their continuing in misery to this day: Preferring knowledge, in expectation, to the favour of God, undid the first rational creatures; fetting up the OPINION of knowledge against the revealed WILL of God, fastens the calamity upon their unhappy children.

It is however furprizing, that men, who are fo fond of, and lay fo much firefs on knowledge, are not more careful to lay up a fufficient flock of it. A late noted writer against Christianity, gave himfelf the trouble to pick up fo much Hebrew learning, as was, in his opinion, fufficient to call in question the application of a few particular passages of the Old Testament to the MESSIAH, and feemed to think that his labours had overthrown the whole evidence that arises from the Old Testament to support the New; without knowing what a little more learning, and unbyassed attention, would have shew'd him; him; that the evidence does not depend on a few texts, that the whole fyftem of the Jewish inflitution, every rite, ceremony, and facrifice, was predictive; and that the chief fcope of all the hymns, and prophecies, was to explain and apply those predictions.

To frame a true notion of any thing, one must confider it altogether, and examine all the parts of it; a just idea can never be got of any object by viewing only feraps of it, and confidering it by halves.

So fares it with revelation, and the evidence of it. No man who has confidered the whole with due care, and has thereby framed a true idea of it, ever did, or ever will reject it; whereas he who will frame an opinion from a partial confideration only, can hardly fail to make a miftake.

It has been taken notice, as an objection of vaft confequence, againft the evidence drawn from the Old Testament to fupport the New, that all the promites and threats, to enforce obedience to the LAW, are every one temporal, relating to the goods and evils of this life, to the enjoyment, or forfeiture of the land of Canaan; to prosperity or adversity in this world, without the least mixture of any confideration that relates to the life to come; and thence it has been concluded, that the Jews had no expectation given them of future happines; that the Sadduces, who denied the refurrection, found nothing to contradict them in their facred Books; and that a religion fo framed, could not be intended to introduce or lead to the CHRISTIAN.

THE observation which gives rife to the objection, is undoubtedly true: the end of the whole of the fewish inftitution, facred and civil, was, fufficiently to reveal, and preferve to future generations fufficient evidence of that REVELATION. The way chosen by the Deity to preferve the evidence, was to felect a particular people; to make them all witneffes of the miracles that demonstrate the certainty of the revelation; to establish among them fuch observances, throughout all their generations, as should commemorate and predict; to reduce his Will into writing, for the greater certainty; to give them the kceping of that writing; to lay before them the flrongest motives, that, as a people or nation, they were capable of; to keep up unviolated these observances; and to preferve untouched his written will; to promife to give, and to keep them in possible of the land of Canaan, a land flowing with milk and honcy; to engage to refide amongft them, and to direct and protect them from all harm, and to favour them with all national bleffings; and to threaten them with all national ills if they failed in keeping his LAW, that is, preferving the evidence of his REVELATION.

AND, to make those motives the flronger, we fee that the Deity was pleafed to enter into a formal covenant with the whole people, as a PEOPLE, which bound him to the performance of all these articles; upon condition, however, that the people performed, on their part; and bound the people, abfolutely, to the keeping and observance of his LAW, with a formal fubmiffion to the threatnings and denunciations of ruin and deftruction, if they failed in the performance of their part, to which they explicitly confented, by pronouncing the curfes against themselves if they difobeyed.

AND, in fact, we observe that God performed, literally, his part of this agreement; with mighty power he introduced, and maintained, this people in pofferfion of the promifed land; he refided in the midft of them; he cherifhed them when they kept his LAW; and chaftifed them when they were remifs in his fervice : when their rulers, their princes, and nobles, fought after other gods, and flighted his fervice, the NATION, as fuch, was delivered to flavery; when they returned in their hearts to their duty, they were reftored to their land, and became again a NATION; but when they nationally corrupted themfelves, forgot the end of the LAW, framed to themfelves unworthy notions about their God, his REVELATION, and SALVA-TION, which by the whole law was predicted, and carried their perverse imaginations fo high, as to put to death, as a malefactor, the DELIVERER of mankind; then God executed the threats, to which the people by covenant had agreed; he difperfed, and blinded them; and, by preferving them fill under that DISPERSION and BLINDNESS, preferves the evidence of the REVELATION as firongly and clearly, as it was preferved by them whilft a NATION, in poffeffion of the promifed land.

THE COVENANT, then, with the people, was literal; all the promifes annexed to the performance, on their part, were literal, and literally performed; the end the Deity had in making that Cove-NANT is obvious, and has manifeftly been attained: but will it from thence follow, that the LAW itfelf, with all the emblematical rites, ceremonies, and inftitutions, had no higher meaning, did not fpeak a language very intelligible to every individual Jew, who had a foul to be be faved, and who, from those divine inflitutions, was to discover the will of God, and conceive hopes of mercy and forgiveness; or that the observing and meditating on this Law, so often recommended to every individual, was not necessarily to lead them to the know. ledge of God, and to the expectation of his favour, in a future flate?

To fatisfy one's felf about this, no more is neceffary than to look into the hiftory, and the other facred writings of the Jews, where the religious fentiments of infpired men, the declarations of the Deity, the profeffions, prayers, and confeffions of the church, fufficiently fhew what each individual was to fee and believe, and what the wife and the devout did believe: Comparing the law with thefe things, one has a Key to decypher the typical inflitutions, and a certain explication of all that it behoves us to know of the Mofaick inflitution; and it will evidently appear, that the Mofaick inflitution, which is no more than a REPUBLICATION of the REVELATION and inflitutions, originally given to Adam, together with the accounts he gives of things, contain a full diffeovery of all that MAN was to know, and to believe, concerning God, and himfelf, that was not diffeoverable by the light of nature, fo much prized, and idolized; of late.

IF one, from the reflections already made, is fatisfied that the LAW of Mofes is from God, and that the fewifb SCRIPTURES contain the REVELATION of the Will of the Deity, recorded and preferved with fuch industry and evidence, not for the fake of the fews, but for the fake of all mankind, he must look upon them as an ineftimable treasfure, flored with important truth; and cannot think any pains, beflowed in perusing and understanding them, lost; or any thing from them difcovered, to be trivial or doubtful.

A CYPHER is, in itfelf, obfcure; make use of the KEY, it becomes intelligible; and, if by fo doing it becomes clear and intelligible, you are certain you have the right KEY.

THE fcriptural rites, inflitutions, and ceremonies, are emblematica!, and therefore, in fome degree, obfeure; find out but a Key to explain the meaning of those EMBLEMS, that fhall make all fense, and truth, and you are fure your Key is a true one.

THE ancients recorded their fentiments, their actions, *bieroglyphi*cally, that is, emblematically, by figures of things animate or inanimate, expressive of their meaning; the KEY to, or DICTIONARY, if one may fo term it, of those EMBLEMS is now loft; and, if it could be recovered, would certainly explain those Egyptian antiquities fill preferved. To us that fort of writing is obscure, but it was not fo to the Egyptians who made use of it: and it can with as little reason be imagined, that the emblematical religious service, infituted by God, was obscure, or not perfectly understood by those who were commanded to observe it, and for whose comfort and instruction it was established; on the contrary, it could not answer the end, if it was not plain and intelligible.

It has been already observed, that all men are not alike fagacious, and confequently not alike qualified for discovering, and knowing, their misfortune, their duty, their felicity; and that the Reve-LATION of the will of God, to be perfect, must be fuch as should accommodate itself to all, and tend to lead all to their duty; a confequence whereof it is, that MEMORIALS should be established, even of things discoverable by the light of Nature, by the penetrating, for the use of the less clear-fighted, if reflection on those things was to be of universal use.

THE SCRIPTURES are the most ancient of all writings extant; the language in which they are wrote, is now no more, and has not for 2000 years been in common use; and there is not a line of that language, now in being, but what is contained in the facred Books.

WITHOUT the affistance of the Greek translation, and fome other paraphrases, and helps from later languages, the Hebrew Scriptures, though in our hands, would be altogether useles to us.

AND therefore we must reverence the divine providence, that made the Babylonifb Captivity, and the Difperfion that followed upon it, which drove multitudes of the Jews into foreign countries, where they forgot their own, and learned the prevailing, the Greek language, the inftrument or occasion of procuring that translation, by which we can certainly decypher the Hebrew, and come at the perfect knowledge of almost all the SCRIPTURE, at least of fo much of it as is neceffary for the great END God had in view, the evidence of the truth of the REVELATION of his will to mankind.

As no other book comes near to the SCRIPTURE, in point of antiquity, it is a difadvantage to us that we do not precifely know, further than we can collect from the facred BOOKs, the cuftoms, the manners, the fentiments, and common notions, that prevailed amongft men, at the date of the feveral transactions related; and are theretherefore at a lofs to conceive, and diffinctly to account for, the reafon and meaning of feveral phrafes, directions, and obfervances, whilft the ancients, to whom those things were faid or delivered, well knew what they meant, and for what end they were recorded. But, though we do not know exactly why the thing was fo phrafed, or cannot tell, precifely, the immediate origin of the particular inflitution, yet by comparing of texts, we can fee evidently the general fense of the phrafe, and collect the end of the INSTITUTION, fo far as the knowledge of the one or the other is neceffary to the great defign of God; and therefore ought rather, with thankfulnets, to acknowledge the goodness of God, who through the midft of 16 many difficulties, has preferved to us all neceffary knowledge, than repine at the loss of that which would tend chiefly to gratify curiofity.

THE higheft act of religious fervice in the fewifb church, and amongft all mankind, was SACRIFICE, which, tho' in observance as early as Adam, was nevertheless re-established by Moses, with many particular positive injunctions, and many negative precepts; correcting abuses that had crept into that INSTITUTION, from the false notions of men.

IT was common to all forts of SACRIFICE, that the BLOOD of the animal was fpilt, and deemed of very high efficacy; and the whole body, or fome part of it, that which was the most inflameable, the fat, and the inwards, was burnt with fire on the altar.

THIS BLOOD is directed, carefully and very early, to be abflained from; it is faid tobe the life of the animal; it is reprefented as what by the touch polluteth, and at the fame time it is reprefented the most fovereign Purifier: by it the altar, the ark, the Sanctum fanctorum, the tabernaele, the priest, were fanctified, were cleansed, were hallowed.

THE BURNT-OFFERING is properly term'd Afcension, from the parts of it alcending in fmoke by fire; the BLOOD is faid to atone, and the SMOKE to be of a fweet favour, or a favour of reft to the Lord.

THE party who offered was to lay his hands upon the head of the Victim facificed for fin, when it was to be killed.

AND the very intent of the SIN-OFFERING was to atone for the fin a man came to the knowledge of, and confelfed.

THE Deity, confidered as the punifher of fin, and as in a flate of anger and wrath against the guilty, is always represented under the image of Fire, a confuming, devouring Fire.

IF God, then, to commemorate his declaration of mercy and pardon to mankind, and to preferve and encourage their hopes, through the interceffion of a Saviour, who was to be flain and bruiled for their fins, was pleafed to direct that an innocent animal, to reprefent the great Interceffor, fhould be flain, and that for the fins of him who brought him to the altar; That his Blood flould be field, and (prinkled upon the altar, and poured out at the foot thereof; that the carcals, or at leaft the fat the covering of the inwards, the most inflameable part of it, should be committed to the facred fire, the emblem of the wrath of the Deity against it; and, being confumed, thereby found afcend towards the heavens in (moke, which (moke) is reprefented as of a fweet favour, or favour of reft to Jehovah; and if man was told that this commemoration of the promifed falvation was to atone for fin, and procure favour, how could there be any doubt in his mind that the Victim was only typical; that the vertuewas really in the thing typified; that the Blood that fanchified every thing, and atoned for fin, was not the blood of the Victim; and that the Smoke, afcending from the facrifice confirmed by fire, was emblematical only of fomething elfe that was to afcend, from the typified Victim, to propitiate, and reconcile God to the finner.

IT cannot, with reafon, be doubted that the merciful God, who inflituted SACRIFICE for the comfort and influction of mankind, communicated to him the end and meaning of the feveral appointments; and, being once different, the EMBLEMS are in themfelves to expreffive, and the taking them in the literal fende to abfurd, that it is no finall proof of the corruption of human nature, and the flrength of giddy IMAGINATION, that they ever came to be miftaken, or mifapplied.

IN SACRIFICE, which was daily to be repeated as the higheft act of devotion, man had the flrongeft Memorandum of his FALL; of the forfeiture thereby; of that life for which the BLOOD, the LIFE, of the VICTIM was to be fhed; of the anger of God which mult have confumed him, if what was reprefented by the BURNT-OFFERING had not interpofed; and of the excellency of the SACRIFICE typified, by whofe oblation the Deity was placated and reconciled. Reflections on this SYMBOLICAL act, and what clearly was intended by it, muft put put the mind in the most proper disposition for acknowledging, praying, and praising.

AND, therefore, befides the daily, the weekly, the monthly, the yearly, facrifices, at flated times, it pleafed the Deity to direct the iteration of the fame SYMBOLICAL act, whenever man, moved by reverence to the Deity, was defirous to approach the place he chofe for his fervice, in order to pray, to praife, or to rejoice, in his mercy, or favour. His peace offerings were to be offered with gladnefs; and, after the BLOOD was fled, and the FAT burnt upon the altar, the party who made the offering was to feaft on the remainder with joy, in confidence of the favour of the Deity.

NAY, the perpetual obligation to abftain from BLOOD, and the FAT of animals flain, even for private use, was a constant Memo-randum, to fuch as could not attend the publick fervice, of their for-feiture, and of their reftoration.

AND the neceffary oblation of the FIRST-FRUITS, and of famples of what the earth yields for our fupport, in the regular meat and drink offerings, were fo many memorials of what was to be with, or in, the great SACRIFICE, that it is furprizing the meaning fhould have been fo much miftaken as, in time, it came to be.

THAT the fame INSTITUTION, not dependent on the publication of the LAW by Mofes, reached all nations, is evident from the antient, and universal, practice of all nations, with whom SACRIFICATURE was the higheft act of devotion, thought fufficient to explate fin, and to procure favour, and even fellowship with God.

THE antients of all nations fhed BLOOD, and believed the vertue of it to be wonderful, witnefs their TAUROBOLIA, and their CRIOBOLIA, burned the FAT, and fometimes the whole VICTIM on altars with fire; and believed the fmell grateful to the Deity; they offered FIRST-FRUITS; they poured out LIBATIONS; they burned famples of the grain the earth afforded them; the SALT of the COVENANT was not wanting; they vowed SACRIFICE, and returned thanks by SACRIFICE; and in their PEACE-OFFERINGS they feafted before their God on part of the victim, and rejoiced in his favour, and protection.

TIS true, the greatest part of them, fuffering their IMAGINATIONS to miflead them, forgot the express prohibition not to eat BLOOD, but ftill they retained the highest opinion of its efficacy. If they ate the BLOOD of facrifice, it was to render them more perfect, and more acceptable; and if, instead of fprinkling the altar, they befineared their own bodies with BLOOD, they gave thereby the ftronger evidence of the merit and vertue, they imagined was, in the blood they made that use of.

BESIDES the VICTIM, another main ingredient in SACRIFICATURE was the PRIEST, the Perfon directed by God to approach his altar, and to make the oblation, and atonement in the name of Jehovah, for the party offering.

THE PRIESTHOOD, originally, refided with the first-born, with whom alfo, amongst the antient heathens, refided the ROYALTY.

1 N I/rael God exchanged, formally, the first-born for the Levites, and took the Levites, in their room, for the fervice of the tabernacle.

OF the house of Levi Aaron, the first-born, was to be High-Priest, his fons were to ferve under him in SACRIFICATURE, and the bulk of the Levites were for inferior service only.

THIS High-Prieft was to be perfect; he was to be confectated with BLOOD, and anointed with OIL; he was to be pure from all fpot; he was, whilft officiating, to be clothed with holy garments, all of linnen; he had precious, and very particular, robes and ornaments appointed for him. In the Breast-plate of Judgment he was to carry URIM and THUMMIM, LIGHT and PERFECTION, by which God gave refponfes; on his heart, and on his fhoulders, were the names of all the tribes of the people, engraved on a plate of pure gold, to be conftantly, whilft officiating, worn; on his forehead was the infeription Holy, or Holiness, to Jehovah. The Plate, with this infeription, was faid to be upon his forehead, that he might bear the iniquities of the holy things, which the Children of Ifrael. fhould hallow, in all their gifts, and that they might be accepted. This Prieft was to fprinkle the BLOOD; was to offer the BURNT-OFFERING; was to make atonement for fin, and reconcile; was to enter, with BLOOD, once a year within the VAIL, into the SANCTUM SANCTORUM, the EMBLEM of the refidence of the invifible God; was to fprinkle BLOOD upon the MERCY-SEAT; and was, when he came out, folemnly to blefs the people.

NOTHING can be more abfurd than to fuppofe that Aaron was HOLINESS to Jehovah; that he was clean, and innocent; that he had in him light, and perfection; that he fupported the whole people of Ifrael; that he could effectually atome for, and intercede with God, for the people; or that he could enter into the real prefence of Jehovah, houah, and from thence bring a bleffing to the people; and, confequently, nothing is plainer than that, in all these particulars, Aaron was no more than a Reprefentative.

IF Aaron was to represent a Perfon pure, and innocent, full of light, and perfection, the holy one of Jehovah, who was to fupport, and have for ever on his heart, the people of God; who was to offer blood, effectual, for cleaning them from their fins; was thereby to atone, and make continual interceffion for them; was to enter into the immediate prefence of God, to propitiate for the people, and from thence to blefs them; how could he do this otherways than by washing his body with WATER, as the EMBLEM of purity; by putting on white linnen GARMENTS, as the EMBLEM of INNOCENCE; by carrying URIM and THUMMIM, i. e. Light and Perfection, fomething by which the Deity manifested itself, about with him; by having the infeription of the holy one of Jehovah fastned to his forehead; by having the names of the tribes of Ifrael on his heart, and on his shoulders; by sprinkling the BLOOD for atonement; and offering the BURNT-SACRIFICE, that yielded a favour of reft; and by entring in folemnity into the HOLY OF HOLIES, the EMBLEM of the refidence of the invifible God, there again to fprinkle BLOOD, and from thence, formally, to blefs the people.

IN the merciful act of the Son of God for the falvation of mankind there are two parts, the PASSIVE, if one may fo fpeak, and the AC-TIVE; the VICTIM bleeding and burnt reprefents the PASSIVE part; but then the great SACRIFICE was not compelled to fuffer by the act of any one; the finner did not offer it; the SACRIFICE voluntarily offered itfelf, by doing fo atoned, and continues ACTIVE in making interceflion perpetually.*.

THE VICTIM bleeding, then, points out this PASSIVE part of the fatisfaction; but the ACTIVE part, that which claims, fo neceffarily, the acknowledgment, and adoration, of mankind to that beneficent, bleffed, Being, that offered the atonement, and makes interceffion, would not have been pointed out in this emblematical act, unlefs fome thing, or perfon, to reprefent him, acting in that capacity, had been fixed upon; fomet hing adorned with the higheft SYMBOLS of purity, fanctity, and perfection, offering and interceding for mankind; and who can fail to fee thefe characters in the High-Prieft?

AND

\* N. B. Amongst the heathen, when a VIGTIM scened reluctant, that was deemed a bad  $O_{\rm MEN}.$

AND therefore, as has been obferved in the cafe of the VICTIM, no one, who believes the INSTITUTION divine, can doubt that the end and meaning of each particular was explained, when the obfervance was first appointed.

AND whoever admits this, must also fee that the original REVE-LATION was very clear, circumstantiate, and diffinct; and that the MEMORIALS inflituted for preferving the knowledge, then revealed, and maintaining the impression of it on the spirits of men, were very expressive and significative, and with great accuracy adjusted to the ways of thinking of those who recorded every thing, intended to be known, by EMBLEMS, and SYMBOLICAL representations, however dome of the particulars may not be now clear to us who know not the proper meaning of fome of their SYMBOLS.

THE affumption of the Levites in place of the firft-born is, vifibly, no older than Mofes; but it feems very clear the firft-born were, before that inflitution, in fome fenfe, what Aaron wore on the plate of the mitre, HOLY, or HOLINESS to Jehovab; and were all, as reprefentatives of the great INTERCESSOR, entitled to fhed BLOOD, and exercife the Priefly office, till the change was made, for very wife, and juft, reafons.

No more is recorded of the first promise than that The feed of the woman should bruise the head of the serpent: So that it does not appear, from this text, to have been originally declared that the SAVIOUR was to proceed from a VIRGIN.

AND, if that had been declared, it would have been difficult to have found out any Reprefentation fit to express, and keep up the memory of, it.

BESIDES, that the expectation of being the mother of that Saviour might have, with believing women, prevented marriage, as the fame hopes promoted it among the Ifraelites, who looked for that feed, in the ordinary way; nay prompted fome women to unlawful actions with men of the Line, who they fuppofed had the promife of the Seed, as Lot's Daughters; Tamar, the Midianitifb woman; Bathfheba, &c.

BUT we find the expectation of the promifed Seed was confined to the first-born, that which opened the womb.

Primogeniture was reckoned after the mother; the first-born of a fecond wife was entitled to the rights attending it, in prejudice of the the fecond fon of a first wife tho' born, in point of time, ever so long before him. v. 1 Chron. 5. 1, 2.

A N D the right of Primogeniture was confined to the male opening the womb; fo that, if a daughter came first, the right ceased in the fubfequent fons.

It must have been for fome very important end that God marked out this circumstance of the fir/t-born, the fir/t that opened the womb, with fo extraordinary characters, that as the fir/t-born amongst men was to be holy to the Lord, and to officiate as Prieft, or Interceffor. the fir/t-born among beasts were also to be holy to the Lord, to be offered to him, if clean; if unclean, to be ranfomed.

Who, then, can doubt that the prerogative of PRIESTHOOD was annexed to the fir/t-born, to keep in mind, and to point forth, that the great INTERCESSOR was to be a fir/t-born; and that the fir/t-born, in every family, were cholen for the PRIESTHOOD, as lo many Types, or fymbolical reprefentations of him.

At the first peopling, and, afterwards, at the repeopling of the earth, when men began to spread, and separate into new settlements, it was necessary to keep up the service of God, and the knowledge of his REVELATION, by the established SYMBOLS; to have a Pric/twho could shed BLOOD, and make atconsment, in every family. And it seems certain every family had its Pric/t (the first-born) its holy things, and all the appurtenances of religious fervice.

WHEN ambition joined many families into common-wealths, or kingdoms, and human prudence would make laws, this right of PRIESTHOOD could not fail to come under fome regulations, different from the original INSTITUTION; tho', for the first ages of the world, it remained still in the highest effect.

WHEN men, from their vain imaginations, began to miftake, or mifinterpret, the original REVELATION, and to devife new notions, and new fervices, for themielves, it became neceffary to republish RE-VELATION, with all the marks of omnipotent power; and, to prevent miftakes for the future, it was fit to erect the  $\mathcal{J}ewifh$  flate, as above hinted, and to give them the keeping of the LAW, and the obfervation of all the rites, and ceremonies.

BUT as this LAW could not poffibly have been fo accurately obferved whilft the PRIESTHOOD was executed, at large, by the fi - fl*lorn* in every family, it pleafed God to alter the original inftitution, and to make choice of one particular tribe for his fervice; and, out of of that tribe, of the fift-born and his defcendants for ever to ferve at the altar, and to reprefent the High First-born, the great Interceffor, in all the fymbolical fervice that fupported the knowledge, the faith, the hope, of those that feared God.

AND, in the very order for changing the INSTITUTION, the knowledge of the original inflitution is preferved; the Levites are faid to be taken in place of the first-born; and the regard for the first-born is still preferved, as holy to the Lord, by making it neceftary to redeem them by an oblation; not to speak of the prerogatives still accruing to them by the fewish civil constitution.

THOUGH the fewish law has a particular, additional, reafon for the fanctity of the fir/t-born, to commemorate the delivery of their first-born from the common calamity of the first-born in Egypt; yet, by the proceeding of God towards the Egyptian first born, it is evident the notion of their importance was strong, before that event.

IN the original meffage which Mofes was to deliver from JEHOVAH to Pharaoh, Ifrael is called his first-born: and, if Pharaoh did not difmifs him, JEHOVAH was to flay Pharaoh's first-born; and the fame Ifrael is, afterwards, called a nation of PRIESTS.

WHEN Pharaoh, hardned by his vain heart, and doubtlefs prompted by the Priefts of those gods whom he ferved, refused to let the *first*born, the Priefts of JEHOVAH go, the threat was literally executed; all his first-born were flain, and the first-born of Israel were delivered.

IF Egypt had any hopes from their firft-born, the threat was fevere, and the execution terrible; and we fee it prevailed, above all the other judgments, for the deliverance of Ifrael.

AND that Egypt had hopes from their first-born is very likely, from what appears to have been the practice, and opinion, of their neighbours, who burned to Moloch, and facrificed, on great exigencies, their first-born, in hopes of placating the offended Deity: Whence could a practice to, feemingly, monstrous come, but from the first promife mislunderstood?

E fau's felling his birthright, the infamous character that brought him, the, feemingly, extraordinary fleps his mother took (when 'tis not observed that she was directed by the Oracle) and the loss of the bleffing confequent upon it, sufficiently shew the high effcem of Primogeniture, before the days of Pharaoh. And, indeed, the parting so cheap with a privilege so high, as representing the Interceffor  ceffor between God and Man, gives a very vile idea of E fau, if one can help calling him a Freethinker, which he could hardly be, confidering his concern for the bleffing.

THAT Priesthood and Primogeniture went, antiently, together, we gather from prophane history,

Rex, Anius idem, Phabique facerdos.

ŧ

The Lacedemonian Kings were both Priefts and Kings, because it could not be decided which was first-born; and almost all the antient kings facrificed.

WHATEVER corruptions imagination introduced in religion, the Prieftbood was ever held in great honour; the original inflitution was ftrangely depraved in the Roman flate, but ftill the Prieftbood continued to enjoy, at leaft, it's antient titles; the term of Rex facrorum, Rex facrificulus, went down through the Roman common-wealth, where the title of Rex was abominated. And the Roman Emperors, notwithftanding their ignorance, and vanity of afpiring after DEIFICATION for themfelves, yet affected the title of Pontifex Maximus, as an honour, and a fecurity to their government.

THE religious regard for SACRIFICATURE, and the reverence for the PRIESTHOOD muft have been flamped deep upon the minds of men, by a very extraordinary authority; elfe they could not have endured for fo many generations, and amongst nations fo little conversant with each other.

THO' Rome, and the Greek commonwealths, effablished on levelling principles, feem to have forgot that any prerogative at all was due to Primogeniture, yet it was not fo with more northern nations, whose notions were less corrupted with imaginations. The Goths, the Franks, and the other People called Barbarians, who overthrew the Roman Empire, preferved continually a regard for it, and have left large prerogatives attending upon it over all Europe.

As the original REVELATION, for the prefervation whereof those rites, ceremonies, and observances, were instituted, discovered to man, in the ordinance of SACRIFICATURE, the chief foundation of his faith, and hope; fo, it is evident from other rites, observances, and fymbols or emblems, constantly observed, and preferved, that from the beginning man was taught his duty, what he was to do with respect to, and what he was to believe concerning, the Deity.

К

Of

OF this the universal practice of ABLUTION, or washing with water, is an inftance which, from the earliest times, has taken place over the whole known world.

THE Ifractites, before they received the LAW, were to wafh themfelves, when they were to approach the prefence of God: all Nations had their LUSTRATIONS, by fprinkling of water. The High-Prieft, and his fons, were to wafh their flefh, as often as they went about any part of the facred work; and the children of Ifrael, upon any uncleannefs, were to wafh with water, in many cafes, with particular ceremonies.

TOUCHING any filth, or naftinefs, a dead carcafs of any kind, the fore or iffue of man, or woman, were faid to pollute, were fufficient to debar the party from appearing before the Lord, who is deferibed as abominating every thing that is unclean; and ABLUTION, with certain other obfervances, were fufficient to put an end to that uncleannefs, and to admit to the fervice of God.

No man, in his fenfes, can think that the external uncleannels of any perfon, in the literal fenfe, or the imputed uncleannels, as one may fay, by the touch of an unclean thing, could be offenfive to God; much lefs that washing with water, confidered as an external act only, could remove any real, internal uncleannels; and that, therefore, it is impossible to doubt that both the one, and the other fignified something more than is in the letter expressed.

THO, by the Light of Nature, we can different this creation had an author eternal, infinitely perfect, and particularly infinitely juft, good, wife, and intelligent; yet we, who can frame to ourfelves no adequate idea of our own fouls, and who know nothing about them, but the little we collect from what we feel transacting in ourfelves, ought not to be furprized, that, without REVELATION, we can frame to ourfelves no juft notion of the invisible God; but ought rather to be amazed at the impudence of those, who pretend to decide what God is, or is not, and what he can, or cannot do, from the notions they have framed to themselves of his attributes, nature, and perfection.

THE first hint we have in the facred Book that can help us to any notion of the Deity is, that man was framed in his LIKENESS, and according to his image; from whence we may not only collect the intelligence of the Deity, which Nature fufficiently difcovers, but alfo inclinations.

clinations, or difpolitions, in the divine mind, to which those in the mind of man, in the state of perfection, were something similar.

DISLIKING, hatred, anger; liking, pleafure in the actings of creatures, love, jealoufy, inclination reftrained, compaffion and concern, are affections which the Wife men of this world hold the Deity incapable of, they look fo like paffions that cannot touch a Being infinitely perfect, and effentially happy; and in this reafoning they agree with Epicurus, who rejected all providence, touching the things of this world, becaufe he looked upon the care it prefuppofed o be troublefome to the Deity.

BUT REVELATION differs from these Wife men; it describes the Deity as posseled of affections, and inclinations, fimilar to those that a perfect man may feel in himself, and something still higher and peculiar to God: Detestation, hatred and abhorrence, of fin; anger, and wrath against the finner, as such; Compassion towards the miferable, and concern; Desire, tho' fometimes without success, to fave, and to reform; Love to those that do well, statisfaction in their welldoing; pleasure in the acknowledgments, and praises, of those benefitted, and attention to their requests; as well as jealously, and indignation, at the setting up any Rival for acknowledgment and praise.

Now if any man will give himfelf leave to confider to what purpofe God difplayed fo much wildom, power, and goodnefs, in the formation, and prefervation, of this whole material fystem, of man, and of all other living creatures; to what purpofe man had difcernning and reafon given him; to what purpofe he had the ideas, and the law of right, and wrong, imprinted on his mind; and to what purpofe he had in his heart planted a difposition to admire, to adore, to reverence, to acknowledge, to thank, and to praife; he cannot long be in fuspence between REVELATION and IMAGINATION, but must affent to the truth of what the Deity has revealed?

Did God exert infinite power, wifdom, and goodnefs, in the creation of this world; did he give man eyes, and underftanding, to fee that wifdom, power, and goodnefs, and a heart difpofed to admire, adore, and praife; and will it neverthelefs be faid that this admiration, adoration, and praife is indifferent to him? Muft it not, neceffarily, be concluded that thefe things are well pleafing to the Deity, and that the man who yields them is acceptable to him, ftands in his favour, and good-will, and may be confidered as beloved of him? And muft it not, with equal certainty, be concluded that the man who refufes to anfwer the end of his creation, who neglects to pay God that adoration, praife, and fervice, that is due; who fixes his heart on the creature, in place of the Creator; and who gratifies those lufts, and purfuits, he has fet up in the room of God, at the expence of breaking the laws of right and wrong, implanted in his breaft, is difagreeable to God, the Object of his anger, and indignation; and that his finful, treafonable actions are offensive to that Being that delights in right, in harmony, and in order?

Philojophers may puzzle themfelves, and others, with reafoning, from abflract notions which they have framed to themfelves, as they think fit; they poffibly may not fee how a Being infinitely, and effentially, perfect and happy, can admit of acceffion to, or diminution from, that happinefs; but their not being able perfectly to comprehend how this is fo, will be no good reafon to disbelieve what the Deity declares concerning himfelf; or to perfuade that God is not pleafed with the doing of his will, and difpleafed at doing the contrary.

AND, if we can bring our felves up to believe that the infinitely perfect SPIRIT is pleafed, and affected, with the rectitude of the fpirits of men, with the fentiments therein framed, and with the joy and gratitude that flows thence, in expressions of praise, acknowledgment, and adoration, we shall have small ground to doubt (what the Deity formally reveals) that his SPIRIT acts reciprocally on men, that it enlightens, enlivens, and encourages them towards their duty, and felicity.

Nor is the ceffation of miracles, for fome centuries; or the obfervation that nature follows, in all things falling under our cognifance, a fettled, fixed, mechanical, courfe, purfuant to certain effablished rules, any ground to doubt of the communication between the infinite Seirit, and the spirits of men, which, the feripture fays, is and ever has been open. The godly disposition, the religious actings, of the foul operate, as one may fay, mechanically upon the Deity, producing fatisfaction and complacency; and that, again, acts reciprocally upon the foul, by that fort of mechanism, or manner of operation, by which spirit operates on spirit. Were the cafe not fo, God would not have been delighted with prayers, and praises, he would not have commanded and encouraged them; and the duty of man, in the religious acts of the heart, instead of being a bleffing and enjoyment, would be a burthen to him. WE are fo well acquainted with the perturbations, the transports, the ruffles, that pleafures and paffions produce in ourfelves, that we are unwilling to allow any fuch affections in the Deity: But why must affections and inclinations produce fuch diffurbances in the Deity as they do in us? May not God detest fin, diflike the finner, and even deftroy him, without being ruffled, or fuffering his effential happinefs to be impaired? May he not have affections and inclinations like to ours, without those inconveniences that, in our weak frame, attend them?

G O D cannot be defirous, fays a Reafoner, that any thing fhould happen, and yet that thing not happen; becaufe, if he were truly defirous, his OMNIPOTENCE would infallibly effect it. But, then, the R afoner does not confider that this defire is only fpoken of the difposition, the inclination, of the Deity, and not of any formal act of the will. The inclination, the difposition, may lie ftrongly one way, and yet there may be infuperable obstacles that hinder to will what the mind inclines to.

A Prince may have the ftrongeft inclination to pardon an offender convicted, fuppofe his favourite fon, guilty of a crime of the higheft nature, and most dangerous example, and yet reasons of justice and polity may determine his will not to follow that inclination. In the fame way, why may not the Deity be defirous, and even follicitous, that a thing may happen, which, because of higher confiderations, he cannot interpose in, that is, cannot formally and absolutely will should happen?

THESE reflections, and many more of the fame kind, that muft occur on reading the Scriptures, leave it very plain that the language of that book, which deferibes the Deity's actings, affections, and inclinations, in terms borrowed from the ufage, the fentiments and refolutions of men, is not fo figurative as it is generally fuppofed to be; and that we ought to underftand it fomething more literally than Reafoners are willing to allow.

IN every page of the facred Book God inculcates his averfion to, and abhorience of fin, and his deteftation of finners.

T o give men some notion of this aversion, and dislike, he borrows that idea of loathing and abhorrence, that men seel on the sight, or touch, of any nasty, unclean, loathsom, object.

God represents himself holy, jure, undefiled, separated from sinners, of purce eyes than that he can behold iniquity.

ΗE

HE repretents fin as uncleannels, pollution, loathfommels, in the higheft degree; and fimilitudes are taken from many vile, impure, abominable things to deferibe it.

AND he reprefents the finner, as polluted by fin, unclean, and therefore abhorred, and incapable to approach his PURITY, in that unclean flate.

BUT, then, as this picture, by itfelf, would be fit only to diffract, and drive the finner to defpair; he, at the fame time, reprefents a poffibility of wiping away this pollution, and washing the finner clean, by means very natural, and very eafy to be come at.

T o the end, therefore, that this image fhould be the more firongly impreffed on men's minds, and the picture come the more frequently before their eyes, it pleafed God, at the first REVELATION of his will, and INSTITUTION of religious ceremonies and fervice, 'to direct a total abstinence from the touch of every thing that was, either in itfelf, or in the apprehension of mankind, unclean, foul,, or loathfome.

I r pleafed God, alfo, to command the abstaining from feveral things that do not feem, in their own nature, to be unclean or loathfome; and to declare that, by the very contact of fuch things, men became impure, were unclean, and abominable in the eyes of God, and therefore could not be admitted into his holy Prefence, or to any religious act.

B u r this impurity was to be purged away by Ablution, or afperfion, according to the prefeription in the feveral cafes, when the party was wafhed in water, and purifyed, he might prefent himfelf before God; but if, knowing his uncleannefs, he mixed in the fervice of God without being purifyed, the offence was capital, he was to be cut off from his people.

THIS conftitution must, necessarily, produce the greatest nicety, and care to preferve cleanlines, in those who put any value on the favour and fervice of God.

AND, if they were not fo flupid as to look only to the Letter, the external act, it must for ever keep in their view the purity and holinefs of God; the uglinefs and deformity of fin, the abhorrence God had of it, and of the finner, the neceffity of avoiding it, if one would have any communication with the Deity; and the mercy and goodnefs of God in providing a purification to cleanfe from it, fuch as could as eafily be come at as common water, and was as effectual to remove the filth of fin, as water was for common naftinefs. THE whole of this INSTITUTION, which was as antient and univerfal as facrifice, is obvioufly fymbolical and inftructive; and, if the real meaning of it was loft, if men began to think there was any real impurity in the touch of a dead carcafe, or any real vertue to purge fin in water, it must be evidence of their utter degeneracy, blindness and corruption.

PERHAPS, things not really impure were to be avoided as fuch, to create thegreater circumfpection, and to bring the inftruction oftner in view.

It is not reasonable to think that God should enjoin, or prohibit, in matters of religon, any thing in itself absolutely indifferent, under fevere penalties, purely to be a test of obedience.

But it is reafonable to think that a thing in itfelf indifferent may be commanded, to keep up the memory of any fact, or precept, to impart knowledge, and preferve inftruction.

ABSTAINING from the altar after any external pollution could not poffibly have been enjoined, under the pain of death, but for the important lesson it was intended to teach of the holiness of God, and the purity of heart, necessary to those that would approach him.

EATING the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, would not have been prohibited, but to warn our first parents against the ambitious defire of knowing more than came to their share, and the prefumptuous conceit of relying on their own knowledge, and following their own imaginations which destroyed them, and continues to mislead, and undo, multitudes of their weak, vain, defcendants.

THAT fpecies of Infidels that glories in the title of FREE-THINK-ERS, who fet up their own knowledge and underftanding againft the Revelation of God, fplit upon the fame rock on which our firft parents shipwrecked, notwithstanding the beacon that has been fixed on it from the creation of the world.

CIRCUMCISION may have ferved for a mark of diffinction to the Ifraelites, becaufe it was not practifed by their neighbours in Canaan, though it was by the other defeendants of Abraham and Ifaac, Ifhmaei and Efau: But it had undoubtedly a higher meaning, and probably an origin earlier than the days of Abraham.

THAT it had a higher meaning is certain from the frequent declarations. clarations that a circumcifed heart, a heart cut off and feparated from all unruly lufts, and affections, is what God delights in...

AND that it had an earlier origin, feems to be very evident, from the early obfervance of that inftitution, amongft many nations who cannot be believed to have received it from Abraham, or his defcendants.

MEN may dream, but it is impossible to perfuade one that has his eyes open, and who reflects on the bitter animofities that must have been between the Egyptians and the Ifraelites, the high contempt the former must have entertained of the latter, the vanity and tenaciousness of the Priests of Egypt, with respect to the mysteries of their religion, and the impiety and abomination which the religious fervice of the Ifraelites appeared to them to be fluffed with, that the Egyptian Priests, (and they, principally, were in the earliest times circumcifed) would have fubmitted to follow the despifed, detested, Ifraelites in a bloody practice of this kind, and would have transmitted it, as facred, to their descendants.

AND, indeed, if it had been meant only for a fign of diffinction for Ifrael, it ought not to have defeended to Ifhmael, and Efau, but ought to have been confined to the twelve tribes.

IT may, reafonably, therefore be looked on as one of the original Inftitutions appointed just after the FALL, which, though retained here and there, particularly in Egypt, had neverthelets been left off in Abraham's country, where idolatry began to prevail; and was therefore renewed to Abraham, when he was felected, from his depraved country, to be the father of a people to whom the original Revelation fhould be republished, and who were to become the keepers of the Oracles of God.

TAKING this, then, to be the cafe, and recollecting that Eve proved the tempter to Adam; that love to her, who had forfeited by eating, prevailed with him to follow her fate; that inclination to women is the moft fierce, the moft ungovernable of the defires and lufts of men; and that it was fit to eftablish fome very fensible memorial of the offence at the Fall, that should carry instruction along with it, to curb and bridle noxious defires; who can help concluding, that Circumcifion was appointed to fix a permanent MARK on that part of the body, the gratification of the luft whereof, had for great a fhare in the feduction of mankind; and thereby to admonish against all lufts and carnal gratifications, and to advise and instruct men men to cut off all fenfual defires, and to wean themfelves from them?

LYING carnally with woman, even with a man's own wife, than which nothing is more natural, or more innocent, is, in the eye of the Law, a pollution, and required Ablution, before the party could be admitted to the Prefence of God. Why? to prevent the fetting too high a value on it, to check the too fond defire, and purfuit, of it; and to fhew that fuch defires, encouraged, are inconfiftent with that purity of heart that is required in the fervice of God, who claims poffeffion of the whole heart, and will not admit of rivals. And, if this is the undeniable meaning of that prohibition, it is eafy to fee the fenfe of the fymbolical act of cutting off, and flinging away, the FORESKIN of the flefh, than which nothing can be a more proper Emblem of forward, fierce, flefhly, appetites, and fenfual delights.

Though Circumcifion might have been given to Ifrael, as a MARK to diffinguifh them from the other adjacent nations furrounding Canaan, and was, by them, to be confidered as a Mark of the Cove-NANT between them and God; yet that does not fay that the original intention, and emblematical use of it, was to be dropt, or loft; on the contrary, it is evident, from the frequent allufions plainly made to the fymbolical fenfe of it by the infpired writers, that it was flill kept in view, and principally to be observed, by Ifrael.

A N D, in like manner, many of the Institutions, which were in practice antiently, feem to be applied to particular actions or events which were near the time of the renewal of those Institutions in the Jewisb Law. But it does not follow from these applications that the original Institutions, or the fense and meaning of them, were to be dropt or loft. In an earthly affair, each Israelite, when he enter'd upon lands in Canaan, was to bring a basket of fruit, and make a CONFESSION why he performed that action; which proves that those symbolical acts had a formal meaning; and fuggests that there may have been original, formal, Confessions, acknowledgments, and prayers, attending the acts of Religion or Devotion; though, not being recorded, otherwise than in general, that once all the Earth had one Confession, the particular Forms have not descended to us, with fufficient Evidence.

NOTHING is more unjust than the fuggestion that the observation of the SABBATH, or feventh Day, was to take place only amongft the Ifraelites.

tion

IF the Scriptures are to be the rule, the Sabbath had its origin immediately upon the Creation, and before the FALL. God is faid to have RESTED on the feventh day from his work, and to have halhowed the fabbath day, on which it was criminal, nay capital, to do any work.

IF the antient, profane, writers are to be fearched, the Sabbath will be found to antient, that it could not poffibly have been derived from the Yewifh Law. For not to take notice of the frequent mention to be met with of Sabbaths, and days of reft, which might have been borrowed from Jewish cuftoms, it is certain that the most antient Greeks, and the more antient Egyptians, divided the time by HEBBOMADES, a circle or revolution of feven days, to each of which they gave the name of fome planet, except the feventh, which they dedicated to the fovereign of all the heavenly luminaries, the SUN; and this CICLE being no proper, conflituent, part of moon, month, or year, must necessfarily have flowed from Institution: Nor could any thing be a more proper, permanent, MEMORIAL of the Creation than the appointing the obfervation of the feventh day; at the fame time that, debarring man from work, it fequeftered him to the contemplation of the Creation, and its Creator, fo Formation and its Former, and allowed his foul time to entertain itfelf with objects, peculiarly fitted for it.

IF every feventh day man was to be flopped in his career, in purfuit of low, earthly, comforts, by a holy reft, which it was capital to profane by labour; if he was to observe this rest, week after week, in memory of God's having refted the feventh day, after having finished the creation in fix; no mean could be devised more likely to keep up the memory of the creation, and to banish the extravagant Imagination that the world was eternal; and no Institution could lead more neceffarily, and directly, to employ man, at leaft one feventh part of his time, in those speculations that tend to keep up communication between the foul and the Deity, and to preferve the memory and knowledge of the Revelation of God to man; nor could man have been guilty of a more fatal piece of perverfencies than to difcontinue, and leave off, the obfervance which, in all appearance, drew along with it the lofs of the true fenfe and meaning of all the other Institutions. It is one of the reproaches the most infilted on againft against the backfliding Ifraelites, that they neglected the fabbaths of the Lord.

IN the whole of the primitive, religious, fervice, there is not any circumstance casual, every particular, every gesture, is instructive.

IN the PRESENCE of God man fell upon his face to the ground; and, by that act, humbly confeffed his ORIGINAL : hence bowing to the ground is the formal word for worfhipping, which it was high treason to practice toward any idol. And when, from that posture, man raifed himfelf to praife, and to blefs God, he raifed himfelf no farther than the knee, still fo far retaining the posture of humility; and from this pofture the word to fignify Bleffing is taken; as bowing to the ground is used to fignify worshipping, kneeling is used to fignify bleffing.

IF the original Revelation was compleat, man must have been told that the Deity was to defeend to this earth, to dwell there amongft men, and to inftruct by precept and example.

IF this was originally revealed, it must have been recorded, by appointing fome fymbolical observance, fome emblematical reprefentation.

IF, in the Republication of the Law to the Ifraelites, the appointment the most remarkable was to erect, first, a tabernacle, and then a temple, for the reception of the Presence of the Deity, who made repeated declarations that he was to dwell in the midft of the children of I/rael, that he was to refide in the tabernacle, first, and then in the houfe that was to be built for him, and was more particularly to refide between the CHERUBIMS.

ACCORDINGLY, the tabernacle first, and then the temple, having been built, a Cloud, the Glory of the Lord, or the fymbol of his presence filled these mansforms, and the Deity from thence gave responses, and directions, and pronounced Judgments.

IN the facred writings there are many formal intimations that this Institution, and difpensition, amongst the Jews, was typical, and predictive that the real GLORY of the Lord was to come to the temple; that the temple, the fymbol of his manfion, was to be deftroyed; and that the figurative, the emblematical, fervice, and Institution, was to cease, and to give way to the real Prefence, and ipiritual instruction of the Deity.

AND, indeed, by the ceffation of all that fervice, and by the deftruction of the temple, immediately after the Lord who was expected came came to it, we evidently fee the Inftitution could have been to no other end but to create, and keep up, that expediation.

BUT if we look a little farther back, we fhall fee the belief of God's refidence among men, and the practice of building tabernacles, and houfes or temples, for that refidence, much earlier than the rcpublication of the Law from Sinai.

Most of the antient nations had temples, dedicated, for the fuppoied refidence of their gods. The Philiftines had a houfe for Dagon, before the Ifraelites had any for JEHOVAH; and many cities in Canaan are named from the temples of the Deities worfhipped by the inhabitants.

Faceb promifed to make the flone, which he anointed at Luz, Bethel, the houfe of God, and he was as good as his word; for, fome years after, he there built an altar, and facrificed.

THE Ifraelites, upon their going out of Egypt, before the Mefaick tabernacle was built, had a tabernacle in which they believed the Prefence of God to be, and in which the pot of Manna, &c. was laid up.

THE idolaters, who came up amongft the Ifraelites, are reproached with having carried in the wildernefs the tabernacles of their gods, whilft the living God was fo miraculoufly feeding, and protecting them.

THIS Practice, which could not poffibly have come from the Law of Mofes, but which the Law of Mofes, as well as the ufage of Jacob, and of the Ifraelites, flews to have been approved of by God, muft neceffarily have flowed from divine Inflitution, as early as the original Revelation; and was perfectly well calculated to keep in mind the original intimation, that God was to humble himfelf fo far as to defeend to dwell amongst men, and to create a constant expectation of that event.

A N D, as we have already observed on other occasions, if this practice had not had fome very authentick inflitution for its original, it is fearce possible it ever should have universally obtained; nothing being more contradictory to the common notions, which the light of nature could afford, than the belief that the immaterial, incomprehensible Being, should dwell in houses made by hands, and sojourn with such groveling creatures as man. The universal practice, then, in this inflance, is strong evidence that it does not depend upon human invention. Imagination, indeed, would missing from the intention tention of the Inftitution, and would graft many impertinencies on it, whenever the real defign was miftaken; but there is hardly any example of an obfervance, fo feemingly unnatural as this, if univerfal, that cannot be traced up to a divine original, at leaft to fome divine intimation, or inftitution, that gave occafion to it.

As the Institution, we are now upon, was of a very high nature, and important to be observed, and relied on, it is extremely probable that the Deity, to devout men (for to fuch, we know from Scripture, God was pleafed to reveal himfelf) thought fit to give particular proofs of his Presence in the house, tabernacle, or place appointed for his refidence. He spoke to Moses from the tabernacle of the congregation, before the Mofaick tabernacle was erected : And if those temples, or tabernacles, were so honoured on particular occafions, we may ceafe to wonder why the Gentiles took up the belief of Oracular responses from their deities (which, again, is a conceit they hardly could have taken up without precedent.) Knowing that the true God revealed his will to his true fervants, in those places which he authorifed to be fet afide as for his Prefence, and believing their falfe Gods true, and themfelves acceptable fervants, they naturally would accept fuch communications; and their Imaginations might impose on them, or make their belief an easy prey to any impostor, any Priest of a false God, who should have courage and cunning enough to frame a lye.

WHEN we fee an obfervance has, univerfally, prevailed amongst the heathens, which is afterwards approved of by the Law of Moses, we justly conclude it forung from divine authority.

WHEN we fee customs, obtaining among the early heathens, which are prohibited by the Law, we may fafely conclude that those customs were not of divine Institution, but were derived either from fome laudable, pious, practice of the believing Patriarchs, which had been abused, or from Imagination.

THUS we fee the refpect among the earlieft Syrian, and Greek, heathens for BAITULIA, flones which were fet up on end, anointed, and believed to be facred, and in process of time transferred to their temples, and revered as flatues of their Gods.

AND we cannot avoid feeing the practice of confectating, as we fay, a ftone by Jacob, when, upon the manifestation of the Deity, he fet it up, poured oil upon it, vowed a vow, and faid it should be BETH-EL, the house of God.

Burn

But, however that devout act, that folemn memorial of  $\mathcal{J}acob's$ vow, and of the merciful appearance to him, might have been acceptable to God; and, however fuch things might have been religioufly, and acceptably, done by other pious men, before and after him, yet we fee the practice is in the Law prohibited, perhaps, becaufe of its being liable to abufe, and becaufe of the corruptions it had already introduced.

W E fee, alfo, that the Patriarchs fhewed particular, facred, refpect to fome fort of trees. The Oaks of Mamre were, in fome degree, facred to Abraham. It is not impoffible they might have made fome fpecies of trees Memorials, to the end they might think on the thing fuch tree reprefented, fo often as the tree came in their view. Abraham planted a Grove, or Tree, at Beerscheba, and called there on the name of Jehovah, the everlasting God. Many of these emblematical trees, put together, might form groves; and we do know that groves were amongst the most antient places of Worship, amongst the Nations; and that particular forts of trees were held facred to certain Deities, amongst those that had forgot, or rather misapplied, the fervice of the true God.

THESE observances continued to be reverenced as late as Homer; Hettor wishes for a Stone, or an Oak-Tree, from whence he might with fafety speak to Achilles; and loqui a quercu is, in the langnage of the old Italians, to speak with safety.

A MONGST the things which were abufed, and, by the renewal or Jewish institution, were prohibited, ordered to be discontinued, cut down, and destroyed, the Jews have taken in facred Trees, or Groves: But, it appears, the word which they construe Groves fignifies images of Venus, or &c. and it appears that they used facred Trees, and Groves, to the last.

THERE is another inflance, of the fame kind, in the cafe of what we tranflate ORNAMENTS. The original notion of the word carries in it the idea of witneffing, testifying, &c. and some passages of the foriptures feem to point at a very surprizing regard shewed by the Deity to those ornaments. After the defection, in making the golden calf, God commands the people, by Moses, Exod. 33.4, 5, 6. to put off their ornaments from them, that he might know what to do unto them. And the people put off their ornaments, and mourned. We cannot doubt, then, that the people looked upon those ornaments as defences against any fudden mischiefs, or unlucky cafualties; and that that this opinion had fome authority from the conduct of the Deity, in providence, and from the practice of godly men, if not even from divine inftitution; and to this early observance are owing all the Amulets, all the Talifmans, the annuli, amongst the antients, which they looked upon as averruncating of evil, and as so many defences and prefervatives from harm.

Tho' we know nothing of the Ornaments of the Israelites, yet, looking upon the antient Talismans, the Abraxas, the Annuli, and other gems, that are still preferved, which are full of inferiptions, and hieroglyphical figures, of which we can make no certain sense, at this day; we may naturally conclude that the earliest ornaments which had the vertue, the later were only supposed to have, were formed fomewhat in the same way; and that the hieroglyphical figures, with which they were charged, represented fome faceed discoveries, or promises, worn on certain parts of the body, to be perpetual memorandums of the propositions expressed in those emblems.

A N D, accordingly, when the Law was given, by Mofes, in writing, in the room of that preferved, formerly, by Hieroglyphicks, we fee injunctions that the people fhould wear the Law, or parts of it, as Signs upon their hands, and for Frontlets between their eyes, Deut. 6. 8. which the later Jews, understanding literally, wrote passages, as they conceived the most remarkable, of the Law on vellum, which they rolled up in Phylacteries, and wore on their arms, and foreheads, with a fuperstitious regard, in the days of Chrift; and it is for the oftentatious, hypocritical, use of them, making broad their Phylacteries, the Pharises are reproved, Matth. 23. 5. and not for their being at all used, as fome suppose; which shews that the wearing those Signs, and Frontlets was literally, and not in a figurative fense only, enjoined.

IF we observe the Passages of the LAW of Moses, in which the wearing those Signs, and Frontlets, are recommended, we shall find them exceeding important; and that the intent of the recommendation is to keep, for ever, and attentively, in memory the particular transaction, or declaration, to which they relate, by way of evidence that fuch a transaction hapned, or fuch a declaration was made; and, in this light they agree with the fense of the word we translate Ornaments, which implies bearing_evidence, testifying : and, if the meaning of this later INSTITUTION was to inculcate, by written Mcmorandums, the important passages of the LAW, or the fewish economy, it is very natural to think that the end of those Hieroglyphical Ornaments, Ornaments, in use before the written Law, was of the fame nature, to prefent frequently to men's view the most figual articles of the original Revelation.

MEN, who have not fufficiently enquired, may make it an objection to the goodness of God, with an intent to impeach the truth of the Christian Religion; that the world, on the supposition of the Christian scheme, was fuffered to lie so long in darkness: that the Judaick religion was confined, and hidden, in mysteries; and that the Christian religion came too late, and attended with too flender evidence; but, after giving due attention to these hints, they must confefs the original publication of the revealed will of God full, and perfect; that inftructive leffons were conveyed in every Rite, Ceremony, Observance, and Institution ; that the strongest Memorials were establifhed of what was declared, was to be believed, and hoped for; that perpetual Memorandums were appointed for bringing into men's minds their duty, and ftrengthning their belief, and their hopes; and that this knowledge, those institutions, and these hopes, reached over the bulk of mankind, before the renewal of the Law to Ifrael. Tho' mankind to corrupted themfelves, fo cooled and flackened in their duty, and purfued to wantonly, and prefumptuoufly, their own imaginations, as to have loft almost all the knowledge of the things revealed, and of the end and defign of the Institutions; and to have preferved no more than fome great lines of external obfervances, which ferve at this day for evidence, only, that there was a very early REVELATION of the will of God to mankind, joined with hopes of mercy; but do not fnew what the particulars were of that REVELATION, which can be gathered, only, from confidering the facred Institution, as it is delivered, compleatly, in the LAW, explained by the PROPHETS, and perfected by the Gosper.

BUT, after all, tho' in the Inftitutions, already referred to, one may fee very diffinctly, almoft, all the articles of the Chriftian faith, and hope; yet, if the original REVELATION went no farther, it must be owned there are fome great points wanting, fomething difclofed in the GOSPEL, relating to the Deity, that the declarations and inftitutions, hitherto mentioned, do not extend to, and that the light of Nature, by itfelf, could not difcover.

THE Gospel informs, precifely, and formally, that tho' the Godhead is effentially one, yet there are in the divine effence three Persons, equal in perfection, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. That the Son, to fatisfy effential juffice, took on him flesh, was united united to the humanity, fuffered for finners, made atonement for them, raifed the Man, to whom he was joined, from the dead, glorified him with himfelf, and is to make continual interceffion for finners; and that the Holy Spirit, upon the afcention of the Son of God, was fent to inftruct, to comfort, and, as one may fay, to infpire all who, believing in Jefus Christ, should endeavour to do their duty, to ferve, and to glorify God.

THAT this is true every Christian believes, and whoever does fo feels the expediency of being acquainted with it, as it exalts his fentiments of the wifdom, the juffice, the mercy, the goodnefs, the love, of God; and lets him know how to place his acknowledgment, his fervice, his adoration, at the fame time that it cautions him against those fins, and abuses, that can be washed away no other ways than by the blood of the Son of God.

AND, as this is true, and highly neceffary to be known, it would not be of a piece with the reft of the tenor of the goodnefs, and condescension, of the Deity, if, in the original Revelation of Grace, this was not also intimated to mankind, however the perversity, and prefumption of human imagination, and invention, may have confounded, and, thereby, in a great measure, have lost the Memorials inftituted for preferving this REVELATION.

IT will be granted by every Freethinker, because it is the foundation of his own belief, or rather unbelief, that, confulting nature, Unity is effential to the Deity; and that nothing is lefs deducible from the Light of Nature than a Plurality of Deities, nay that a Plurality, in the common fense, is inconfistent with it, and therefore impoffible.

IT is, at the fame time, true in fact that all the antient nations entered readily into the belief of a Plurality of Deities, how contrary foever the opinion might be to the light of Nature; and continued in that faith till Christianity beat them out of it.

ONE would not infer from this that Polytheifm was an article of the original Revelation, because we see the heathens grafted many mistaken imaginations upon what was originally revealed; but it feems to be a fair conclusion that fomething, concerning the Deity, not difcoverable by the light of Nature, and feemingly diffonant to it, was originally revealed, from whence this falfe but universal opinion took it's birth : and if the doctrine of the Trinity was originally promulgated, and believed, it is easy to see how it might degenerate into into POLYTHEISM, as the Chriftian TRINITY ran the hazard of doing.

IF this reflection is candidly weighed; if one confiders that the first teacher of Polytheifm could not possibly deduce his doctrine from reason, but must necessfarily support it from authority; and if one then enquires what degree of authority would be sufficient to draw all mankind into the settled belief of this monstrous proposition, or indeed of any thing a-kin to it, from which this, by imagination or deduction, can be derived, he must needs conclude the authority must be, at least believed, divine, before reasonable creatures could give credit to it, and could be brought to speak of, and make their addreffes to, Gods in the plural number.

It is impossible to make this reflection without joining to it, what has been already observed, that the word ELOHIM, used in the Hebrew Scriptures to fignify God, is plural; owned by all to be such, and particularly by the  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , who have the idea of plurality in the highest contempt, and who make in their translations a very ridiculous diffinction, rendring the fame specifick word when, as they apprehend, it relates to the true God fingular, but plural, Dii Gods, when it relates to the objects of the pagan worship.

THIS reflection is the more important that the word ELOHIM has confeffedly a fingular ELAH ufed fonctimes, but not often, in feripture. Now when the facred writers make ufe almost always of the plural word, not from neceffity, but from choice, it is hardly possible to believe that this choice is altogether without meaning, and that a word, fit not to inform but to miflead, was employed by the Deity, in the written influctions given to mankind.

THE  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , and with them those pretended Chriftians who reject the Trinity, as well as fome who admit it, but are loth to lay much firefs on the idiom of a language, they do not give themfelves the trouble to underftand, firive to invalidate this observation, by fuggefting that the plural may be used honoris causá; as Princes, in our days, express themfelves, WE and OUR, and perfons of condition, spoken to, are addreffed by pronouns in the plural number.

BUT not to infift on what is most certain truth, that the feripture language is, in every other inftance, opposite to this fuggestion, conftantly using the fingular when Jehovab speaks of himself, and most frequently joining verbs and pronouns in the fingular number to the plural ELOHIM; there are many cafes in which the expression cannot possibly be be reconciled to this  $\mathcal{J}ewifh$  pretence, of which this may be an example. Gen. 3. 22. And  $\mathcal{J}ehovah$  Elohim faid behold the man is become like one of us to know good and evil. Here the expression is distinct, and unambiguous, and not to be twisted to the  $\mathcal{J}ewifh$  construction, by any force of figure, or example; One of us necessarily implys more than one, and the  $\mathcal{J}ews$  and their followers are to fensible of it, that they pretend  $\mathcal{J}ehovah$  is here speaking with and to the Angels, bringing them on the level with himself; which he no where else in the foripture does, and which there is no reason to suppose he does in this place, tho' it did not imply an abfurdity; because the plural word ELOHIM preceeding fufficiently shows who the Us were, and forbids the application of that pronoun to any other fet of beings.

As this text affords a demonstration, in its own kind, that the plural ELOHIM is not used by chance, but is the fruit of choice, and fignificative, care is taken in feripture to prevent the grafting the notion of POLYTHEISM on an expression that might lead to naturally to it.

A N D therefore Dent. 6.4. the great command which Chrift, being interrogated, declared to be the first and highest of the Law, and which was directed to be laid up in the hearts of the Ifraelites, to be taught to their children, to be worn as figns upon their hands, and as frontlets between their eyes, and to be written on the posts of their houses, and on their gates, is ushered in with this remarkable admonition; Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord; in the original, Hear, O Israel, Jehovah our Elohim is one Jehovah.

THE word Jehovah is agreed by all to be the proper name or term for expressing the effence of the Deity, it is derived from the verb that fignifies to be, and therefore imports being, existence,  $\delta \vec{\omega}_v$  he who is, who exists, necessarily.

THIS noun is fingular and knows no plural; wherefore there would be very little occafion for the declaration that Jehovah is one, is not plural, if it were not for the plural word ELOHIM, which might lead into a miftake; to prevent which the declaration was neceffary that the in Jehovah, there were more ELAHS than one, yet thefe different ELOHIM were but one Jekovah, one neceffarily exiftent Effence; which is allowing a plurality, not of diffinct Deities, but of diffinct ELOHIM in the fame Effence, Godhead, in Jehovah who is one. ON occasion of mentioning the word Jehovah, the proper name or term used to fignify the Eternal, the neceffarily existing Being, the cause and author of all other Being, it may not be improper to obferve that this name is of the highest antiquity, coeval in all appearance with the original Revelation, and given by the Deity, to express that grand character of his own nature, which modern wise men value themselves on having, as they imagine, discovered from nature, and reason.

For not to mention the authority of Moses, who makes use of that name, just after describing the creation, it appears not to have been unknown to the antients, tho' they lost the fense of it, and confounded themselves with new names for their fictitious Divinities. The oracle in Macrobius declares  $\mathcal{J}auo$  to be the chief God; whence it's plain at least that the found was known by those who confulted. The Zeus of the Greeks was in all appearance from the fame fource, and the Jupiter of the Romans confesses more clearly that original; antiently Jupiter was written and founded Jovis pater; Jovis was the nominative, or, more properly, Jehovab with the Latin -is for a termination in all cases, and Jovis pater became by corruption, in length of time, Jupiter, tho' it retained more of the original found in the genitive, and the other cases.

Now, tho' the Roman people and religion were but modern, compared with that of fome other nations, yet is their Jovis pater, which took much time to be corrupted into Jupiter, very antient; and, if they had their THEOLOGY from the Hetrufcans, or from the Phænicians, the term Jehovah muft have been very pure and diffinct, when it came first into Italy, to have remained fo long fo uncorrupted, as we fee it did. No man, in his fenses, will think the antient Greeks, and Italians, borrowed from the detested Jews the name of their God, and therefore it may be fafely concluded that the name which travelled thus into Greece, and Italy, in the earlieft times, was the name of the God of the whole earth ufed, and honoured by all flesh.

BUT to return to the idea of the Deity given by revelation; tho' the unity of Jehovah is expressly fettled, yet it is manifest from great numbers of texts that there are different perfons, different agents in this effence, that have different characters, and are to be confidered differently by men.

Besides

BESIDES Jehovah, who, by way of diffinction, may be called the first Person, or the Father, in the language well known to all Christians, there is the Name of Jehovah, or the Name Jehovah, the Word of Jehovah, or the Word Jehovah, and the Angel of Jehovah, or the Angel Jehovah, with several other terms all applicable to the fecond Person, or the Son, by the circumstances of the several passages; and there is the Spirit of Jehovah, or the Spirit Jehovah to denote the third Person who retains the fame name in the Christian language.

THO' the term the Name of Jehovah is become fo familiar to our ears in the fenfe that means only the title or appellation, or, metaphorically, the fame and reputation of any one, yet there are flat texts to fhew there is more in the matter; and that perfonality as it is called, is afcribed to this thing called the Name Jehovah, or the Name of Jehovah.

Exod. 23. 20, 21. Jehovah promifes to fend his Angel before the people, of whom they are to beware that they do not offend him, for, fays Jehovah, my Name is in him. This Name faid to be in the Angel is fomething more than will tally with any reafonable acceptation of the word Name, unlefs you will fuppofe that word the Name of Jehovah to mean a Perfon.

I N like manner Pfal. 20. 1. The Name of the God of Jacob defond thee. Ifai. 30. 27. Behold, the Name of Jehovah cometh from far. Zech. 14. 9. In that day Jehovah shall be one, and his Name one. With infinite numbers of passages where the Name of Jehovah is staid to be placed, to dwell, to att, shew to a demonstration that by the Name Jehovah a person, and not a title, is meant; and, indeed, that person by whom the Deity was to be revealed, discovered, and made known, to mankind.

THAT there is fomething very extraordinary in this term the Name of Jehovah, and which corresponds ill with the notion of unity of the prefent fet of rebellious Jews, is evident from the filly fictions they fet up by which to account for the furprizing use made of it. They suppose fomething divine to be in the four letters of which the word is composed; that it is the highest crime and prophanation to pronounce them, except in the High-Priest, once a year on the day of expitation, and therefore never wrote, or attempted to pronounce, that word, substituting in all their writings another word for it, and pronouncing, so often as Jehovah occurs in the reading of the foriptures, foriptures, the word Adonai in place of it. They imagine fomething fo faceed in thefe letters, that whoever could pronounce them truly might work miracles, and controul the power of nature at pleafure; and they carry their irenzy on this fubject fo far, as to account for our faviour's miracles, by faying, that, gaining admiffion into the temple he ftole the name Jehovah out of it, rightly wrote, and pointed as it ought to be pronounced; and, by being fo poffeffed of that fecret, by the force thereof wrought his wonders, and might have wrought as many more as he would. Thefe circumftances will not prove that the term has the force I have aferibed to it, but furely they will convince any reafonable man, that there is fomething very remarkable in the exprefilion, which has puzled the Jews fo much, and put them to fuch ridiculous fhifts to get rid of the force of it.

BESIDES the Name there is another term used to fignify a Person, or Agent, in or of the Deity, under the title of the Word of Jehovah, or the Word Jehovah. This word has many characters of action and personality that cannot possibly agree to what is simple or proper speech. The Word Jehovah, or of Jehovah came, the Word spoke, the Word acted. In Jehovah will I praise the Word, in God the Elohim will I praise the Word. Jehovah fent his Word, &c. and therefore, without scruple or hesitation, the apostle St. John applies it to the divine Person that was joined to Jesus, agrecable to the plain fcope of the Old Testament, and to even the notions of the Chistians, may have, fince those days, devised to obscure the light of the antient icriptures.

THAT the antient Jews, before their difputes with the Chriftians turned their brains, by the Word of Jehovab underftood an active principle, diffinct from the first Person in Jehovab, and alfo called properly Jehovah, is beyond contradiction evident from their antient Targums, of age, if not equal to the advent of Chrift, yet framed before their difputes with the Chriftians had forced them to coin new and perverse notions. All the actions of a diffinct person are attributed to their Mimra Jehovah, the Word of God, in many hundred pass; and often, where Jehovah only is mentioned in the original, yet where according to their conceptions, which originally were true ones, the fecond Person is meant, they have, without hesitation, in their Paraphrases translated it Mimra Jehovah, or the Word of Jehovah,

(87)

Jehovah, which leaves no doubt that the antients underflood the Scriptures, in this important article, as the Apostles did, and as we do.

IF the Targum of Onkelos, which is agreed to be of great antiquity, was published before the Gospel came to be the object of the Jews opposition, this argument has all the force already given to it; and, if in an age later, it has no lefs weight; becaufe no one can fuppose that complaifance to the Christians produced the expressions relied on; and indeed all that fufpicion is excluded, and additional force is gained to the reflection, by confidering that Philo the  $7e\omega$ , who was contemporary with our Saviour, the Ambaffador for the Egyptian Jews to Caius Cafar, unfulpected of Christianity, probably a ftranger to it, fuspected of a spirit of accommodation with Platonick, or pagan, notions in his writings, intending to make his notions as plaufible and palatable to the learned heathens as poffible, cannot divest himfelf of the notion of making the WORD, his Logos, a Person, nay a divine Person, of infinite power, nearly allied to the Deity, tho' with a fubordination that he can find no where in the facred Book.

THERE is fill another term, behind, which the Jews have much obscured, by confining the meaning to one of the fenses which the word bears, it is ANGEL: The Hebrew word from which Malak is derived, fignifies to fend, to employ, to fend on an errand, to do, or fay, any thing; hence Malak, in Greek rendered  $a_{\gamma\gamma\epsilon\lambda\sigmas}$ , in Latin, promiscuously, Angelus, or Nuntius, in English, an Angel, or Meffenger.

To this word, thus fignifying, the Translators, who originally were  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , and all their fucceffors, have given the meaning of what we, in common fpeech, understand by an Angel, a CREATED SPIRIT, of which, we are taught to believe, there are immense numbers; and, what is worse, they have confined the sense to that meaning, infomuch that, when we hear of the ANGEL JEHOVAH, we are to understand by it such a created Spirit.

BUT it happens unlucky for this conftruction that, almoft, always where the ANGEL JEHOVAH is mentioned, there are characters which fhew that this ANGEL is JEHOVAH; for either the Angel calls himfelf fo, and fpeaks in the first perfon, as JEHOVAH, or the perfon, to whom he is fent, acknowledges him to be fuch, and addreffes him under that defignation.

Gen.

Gen. 18. The THREE that appeared to Abraham, in the plains of Mamre, who are called fometimes Men, fometimes Angels, are faid to be Jehovah; Jehovah is faid to have appeared in that form; HE of the Three, that talks to Abraham fpeaks in the first perfon, as Jehovah, and Abraham address his answer to HIM, as to Je-bovah.

Exod. 8. The Angel Jehovah appeared to Mofes in the burning bufh, speaks from the bufh under the title God, gives himself the significant name, which we translate, I AM THAT I AM, and is plainly understood to be Jehovah. Deut. 33. 16. The good-will of him that dwelt in the bufb.

Jud. 9. The Angel that appeared to Manoah's wife, first, and then to himself, is acknowledged to be Jehovah. And every Angel, called, of Jehovah, that appeared, or seemed in vision to appear, to the Prophets, either speak as Jehovah, or are spoken to as such.

Exod. 23. 20. The Angel whom Jehovah was to fend before the Ifraelites, and whom he calls his Angel, had his NAME in him, and was therefore to be observed. And, Malachy 3. 1. The Angel (which we translate the Meffenger) of the Covenant, is declared to be the Lord; and the Lord whom ye feek, shall fuddenly come to his temple: even the Angel of the Covenant, whom ye delight in.

THE Malak, the Meffenger, therefore, the fent, the Angel Jehovah, or of Jehovah, we fee is not always ufed to fignify a created Being, but on the contrary to denote a Perfon of Jehovah, of the Deity, fent as a meffenger to execute the will of Jehovah, of the Deity; and accordingly Chrift, upon many occasions, declares that he is fent of the Father, and came to do the will of him that fent him: which tallies exactly with the language of, and with the Ideas given in, the Old Teftament.

ALL these terms, the NAME, the WORD, the ANGEL OF JEHO-VAH, with several others of the same kind, which evidently shew a distinction of Persons in Jehovah, are by the characters that attend them, clearly applicable to one and the same person, in the Gospel called the Son, from the second Psalm; the express image of the Father's person, who thought it no robbery to be equal with the Father; and by whom, and for whom, the world was made.

THE Old Testament, in multitudes of texts, mentions a third character, with attributes of action as a distinct Person, the Spirit of Jehovah, Jehovah, which is faid to do, and direct many things, almost always under hat specifick name, and in distinction to the other Perfons or characters in the Deity; and the New Testament formally makes this Spirit a diffinct Perfon, acting a proper part in the Occonomy of grace to mankind.

WHEN these things are duly weighed, men must be convinced that the godly, ferious Jews, who ftudied their Scriptures with attention, and without prepoffeffion, must have been fatisfied that there was a diffinction of Perfons in the Deity; and that the WORD Jehovah, or of Jehovah, for example, was diffinet from the Spirit, and both from the Father, who fent the Word; and then their furprize will ceafe at the freedom, and cafinefs, with which Chrift and his Apoftles speak of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, as diffinet Perfons of the Deity, as a thing well known and underftood, without any preamble or apology; whereas, if this had not been a notion commonly received by the intelligent, it is impoffible that the Preacher of Salvation could have made use of, or applied it, without having first explained it, and fo prepared the hearers for it.

AND, accordingly, we find that, when Chrift was examined by the Rulers, they did not at all boggle at the doctrine which mentioned the Son of God, but asked him whether he pretended to be fuch; and, upon his faying that he was, concluded him guilty of blasphemy, without further ceremony; which shews that the Son of God was a phrafe known and familiar to them, as indeed it must be from the fecond Pfalm. And furely they could not have entertained an idea of the Son, without alfo admitting an idea of the FA-THER, which must have made that term also familiar to them.

So that in this inftance it is, as in almost every other it will, on a careful examination, appear to be, the New Testament speaks the language of the Old; the principles and the fentiments are the fame; and the New does little more than explain, and apply, what, by corrupt Imagination, through length of time, was obscured or perverted, and in fome degree loft in the Old.

THE fame confideration that makes the knowledge of the TRINITY neceffary for us, made it fo to the believing Jews, to whom that mystery was disclosed in the Old Testament in writing, and made it fo, allo, to the first believers, to whom the mercy of God was difcovered, whilft hieroglyphical records only were used; and therefore it is very reasonable to expect to meet with some foot-steps of this difcovery, covery, fome hieroglyphical reprefentation, in which it was to be recorded.

WE fee the making of molten and graven IMAGES, reprefentations of things in the heavens or in the earth, to be worfhipped and ferved as Gods, was a practice as extensive, as it was offensive, in the most early times, to the Deity; and, as nothing could in itfelf, and confidered literally, be more abfurd, and lefs deducible from, and confiftent with, nature and reafon, than to make any bodily reprefentation of the Deity, and to ferve and worfhip that figure as divine, it may be pretty fecurely concluded that, great as the abufe was, it was not altogether human invention, but, probably, a notorious abufe from the wantonnefs of Imagination of fome laudable, facred, INSTITU-TION.

THE practife is bitterly cenfured, and, under the most fevere penalties, prohibited, in the Law of Moses. No representation at all was to be made of Jehovah, nor was there any Image of HIM to be met with in the tabernacle, or temple, to whom the people should bow down, contrary to the practice of all the heathen nations.

YET, neverthelefs, both in the tabernacle and temple there were bieroglyphical, or emblematical Figures fet up over the Mercy-Seat, called CHERUBIM, and between, or in them the Deity was to dwell, or refide, and to his Prefence, in that place, the blood was to be brought in within the Vail, on the day of Expiation.

Tho' the form of these Cherubim was fo well known in the days of Mofes that, without any other defeription of them but the name, the workmen being commanded made them; yet the knowledge of the figure they were of, was fo little enquired after by the Jews, when they revolted from God, and receded from the purity of their religion, that they feemed totally to have loft it, before they built the fecond temple. For it appears evidently that they had no Cherubin there, from thefe circumftances : That Philo knew nothing of their form ; that Josephus the learned and inquisitive priest, who lived under the fecond temple, and had proper occasion to have known something about them, had any appearance of them been there, owns the ignorance of himfelf and of his nation, acknowledging they knew nothing about them, but that they were Images of fome fort of winged Animals; and the conclusion from this last observation, and from the utter filence of the Jews, fince the days of Chrift, on that fubject, is certain; unlefs one will choose to suppose that Josephus, and the

the other later Jews diffembled, and concealed, their knowledge, left fome advantage might from thence have arifen to the Chriftians; which is not probable, becaufe the Chriftians, had not become, fo carly, fo much the object of the Jews jealoufy and averfion, as afterwards they were.

THESE Cherubim were to be beaten out of the fame piece of gold that covered the Ark of the Teltimony, called the Mercy-Seat; they were to look inwards towards the Mercy-Seat, the blood, on the day of Expiation, was to be fprinkled on the Mercy-Seat, between them; Jehovah was to dwell, to refide, between, or in them; from thence he was to give directions, and refponfes; and thefe figures, with the Mercy-Seat and the Ark, was all the furniture of the Sanctum Santhorum, the most holy place, the emblem of the divine refidence.

As this was the most holy place, and these figures made out of the Propitiatorium, the Mercy-Seat, were the most facred Emblems, it cannot be doubted they were of very high fignificancy, by any perfon who knows that the whole knowledge of early times was delivered and recorded in fymbols and hieroglyphical representations, and who recollects that every other branch of the Jewish institution was emblematical.

AND, if thefe emblems rightly underftood, conveyed knowledge, and directed the fentiments, and the fervice of the antient Ifraelites, whofe chief joy was meditation on the Law of God, under the first temple; we cannot help lamenting the misfortune of the Jews, under the fecond, who furely had loft all the benefits, the information by those fymbols could give; and who, certainly, could not bring in the blood on the day of Expiation within the Vail, and fprinkle it according to the first directions of the Law.

IF the lofs of the knowledge of those Emblems had been fortuitous, occasioned only by the length of time, between the deftruction of the first, and the building of the second temple, in which all those that knew the form of these Emblems, in the first, had perished, the Jews case would be much to be pitied; but it is by so much the less a proper object of compassion, that abundance of circumstances shew the loss was owing to their own gross fault, and perversens, which justifies the judgment of Blindness the Deity has been pleased, in purfuance of many denunciations, and even of the COVENANT folemnly entered into by their fathers, to execute against them.

THE first Temple was destroyed, and the people carried away, because of their rebellion against Jekovak, and their running after the falle Gods of the nations; and it seems pretty certain that those who forseok Jekovak, entirely, would very little mind, or meditate on, the fense of the fimbols, or service instituted by him; and if any of them returned to their land, it is not very likely they would be follicitous about what they knew nothing of.

It is furprizingly remarkable that, from the promulgation of the Law on Sinai, 'till the deftruction of Jerufalem with the first temple, the depraved turn of the Jews, who followed their own imaginations, was to Polythei/m, quitting Jehovah for the foolifh gods of the nations; and that, contrary to the clearest evidence, though they had amongst them the ARK of Jehovah, the whole ornaments and liturgy of the Temple, the fire of God burning on their altar, the EPHOD with URIM to direct them, the Prophets infpired to instruct them, and the interposition of frequent miracles, to prove Jehovah the only, the true God.

AND it is equally remarkable that, after their return from the captivity, when all these extraordinary pieces of evidences failed, notwithftanding their many faults and follies, they never once nationally fwerved from Fehovah to the fervice of the gods of the nations; but, by guarding against that error, and the faulty effects of encouraging Imagination, they ran into the contrary extreme; becaufe of the UNITY of Jehovah they were unwilling to think of the PLURALITY of Elohim; and, left Imagination fould carry them too far, they would go no farther than the Letter of the Law, and the Exterior of Institutions and fervices, which, confidered purely in that light, fignified nothing, or was apt to millcad; neglecting the precept fo often inculcated, and fo carefully practiced by the godly, to observe, to meditate on the Law, and thereby to discover, and comfort themfelves with, the merciful and beneficent meaning of it. This turn of mind loft the knowledge of the Cherubian, it prevented their feeing the Meffias in Jefus.

As the Cherubim are not fully defcribed in the hiftory of the framing and building of the tabernacle, or temple, and as the Priefts, who might have feen them in the Sanctum Sanctorum, and the other perfons, who must have feen them on the walls and doors of the temple, might have failed, before the fecond temple was compleatly finished, which would have furnished an excuse to the fucceeding Jews for for being without those emblems in the fecond temple, and for neglecting the knowledge thereby conveyed, it pleased God to exhibit to one of his prophets, Ezekiel, in vision at different times, the figure of these Emblems, which he has in two several places, Chap. 1st and 1oth, carefully recorded. And it is not a little surprising, that the Jews unanimously hold Ezekiel to be a prophet, and these passages to be infpired, yet they never thought fit to give the Figures he describes a place in their temple, or to guess at the meaning of them, though they hold that those visions contain the most important mystery.

THE description of the CREATURES, seen in this vision by *Exe*kiel, is so full, and so anxiously, and laboriously given, that there is no mistaking some of the great lines of it. Each CHERUB had four heads, at least faces, and but one body; each had bands of a man and wings; and the four faces were, first, the face of a Bull, which it properly called a Cherub; secondly, to the right of the Bull, the face of a Man; thirdly, to the right of the man, the face of a Lion; and the faces of the Man and Lion are faid Chap. I. V. 10. to have been on the right fide, whereas the face of the Bull is faid to have been on the left fide; and fourthly, the face of an Eagle, without taking notice of any particular conjunction between the face of the Eull and that of the Eagle.

AND the prophet takes fo much care to inculcate that the Creatures, or Figures thus reprefented, were the CHERUBIM, and that the defcription in the fir/t and the tenth Chapter, relate to the fame Cherubim, that there can be no doubt he defcribes the very Cherubim placed in the tabernacle and temple; unlefs it can be fuppofed that this defcription was given, on fet purpofe, to deceive and miflead us.

KNOWING thus, from Ezckiel, the form of the Cherubim, and knowing the usage of the most antient nations, particularly the Egyptians, of framing compounded figures of this kind, for hieroglyphical or fymbolical purposes; from the remains of their antiquities still extant, we can entertain no doubt that this representation was fignificative. He who cannot believe that the Cherubim was set in the Holy of Holies to represent one animal, compounded of Bull, Man, Lion, and Eagle, must necessarily admit that the faces of these animals, fo joined, were intended to fignify feveral characters, powers, or persons, united together in one.

THE

THE Italian Janus was bifrons, fometimes quadrifrons; Diana was triformis; many Egyptian monuments flew  $t \omega o$ , fometimes three heads of different creatures to one body; in vaft numbers of gems, particularly those called Abrawa's, human bodies have the heads fometimes of dogs, fometimes of lions, fometimes of eagles or kawks, &c. and no one can doubt that each of those representations was fymbolical.

IN confidering this fubject we must recollect that, though the building of the tabernacle was not fo early as to give birth to those ftrange compositions over the heathen world, yet this Figure was exhibited, immediately, upon the expulsion of man from Paradife; and was to well known, when Ifrael left Egypt, that the workman made the Cherubim, without any other direction than that of making them out of the gold that composed the Mercy-Seat, and placing them on either end of it looking towards the Mercy-Seat, and ftretching their wings over it. So that the compound Figures of the antients, to reprefent their Deities, had no other original but that, at the east end of the garden of Eden.

HOWEVER the Emblems, or reprefentations, of the heathen divinities may have been complicated of the forms of different animals, originally; yet we fee, with length of time, they feparated those Symbols, fuppofed the different Figures to be different Deities, and at last worshipped them apart.

THE Egyptian Apis, the Bull, in imitation whereof the Ifraelites made their golden Calf, and Jeroboam made his Calves, was but one of those figures; and the deity called Baal amongst the Syrians, which is also called the Heifer Baal, was the fame, and yet was the representation of the great God, the LORD of all.

THE Persian Mithras was in all the Devices of the fervants of that god pictured a Lion, or with a Lion's head; and the Egyptian Sphinx, which flood at the entry of their temples, had but two of the cherubical figures, joined in a firange manner, the head of the Man put on the body of the Lion.

THE Eagle was to the Greeks, and Romans, an emblem facred to Jupiter or Jovis, their great God, whom they pictured like a man; in the talons of this bird they put a thunderbolt, and this expression of thunder, proceeding from clouds, born by the Eagle, whole way in the air is among the clouds, was the enfign of Negerny epérns Zevs: and we know, from Sanchoniathon, that the Tyrians had a pillar facred cred to Wind, or Air in motion, as well as they had to Fire, built as they faid by Ufous the fon of Hypfouranias, which Fire and Wind they worfhipped as gods.

WE know from antient authors, and we fee in antient gems and other monuments, that the Egyptians were very much accuftomed to make the body of their Image, or reprefentation, human, fometimes with the head of a Lion, fometimes with that of a Hawk, or Eagle, and fometimes with that of a Bull, a Ram, or fome other horned creature.

AND as, from the original exhibition of the Cherubim renewed, and recalled to its proper ufe, in the tabernacle, and temple, we fee the antients had a pattern from whence they might have taken those representations, which they monstroufly abused, we may reasonably conclude that these representations which, naturally, and without some inflitution, would never have come into the heads of any men, flowed from an early practice, that had a different intent from that, to which it was at last turned.

κ

AND, from the application made by the antient Pagans of each of the figures in the Cherubim, to fignify a different Deity, we may with reafon conclude, that they underflood that particular figure, in the Cherubim, which they chose for their protector or god, represented, in the hieroglyphical utage of the early times, the power, the thing, or perfon, that they intended to ferve.

THUS, for example, if the curled hairs, and horns, in the Bull's head were, in hieroglyphical writing, made the emblem of Fire in general, or Fire at the orb of the Sun, those, who took material fire for their deity would set up that Emblem, and worship it.

IF the Lion's piercing eyes, or any other confideration, brought that animal to be the emblem of Light in general, or of Light iffuing from the body of the Sun, fuch as took Light for their god, if any fuch were, would fet up the Lion for the Emblem.

AND if the Eagle's foaring flight, and commerce thereby with the air, brought that bird to be the emblem of Air, fuch as imagined a divinity in the Air, in Clouds, in Winds, would take that bird to reprefent their deity.

AND the HUMAN FIGURE in the Cherabim muft, one fhould think, be the moft natural occasion of that universal miftake which all the heathens, at length, dropped into of picturing their gods with human bodies, and the very earlieft gave fome countenance to, in joining bug parts of the human body to, almost, all their representations of their gods.

Now, fo it is, that we do know from innumerable texts of Scripture, and from many paffages in heathen hiftorians, and Mythologifts, that the objects of the earlieft pagan adoration, after lofing the idea of the true God, were the Powers in the Heavens, that were fuppofed to maintain this fyftem; the Sun, Moon, and Stars, the Hoft of Heaven, the Queen of Heaven; Fire, which was fuppofed to be one of the chief agents, in fupporting the motion of the univerfe; Light iffuing from Fire, and the Air, Clouds, Winds, &c. which had infinite force, and were fuppofed to act a very confiderable part in the government, and prefervation of the material world.

IN particular, we know that Fire at the orb of the Sun was worfhipped by the antient Egyptians, who made use of Apis, the Bull, for their Emblem; and that the worshippers of Baal, the Heiser, believed their god had the command of Fire. For, in the remarkable contention between Jehovah and Baa', managed on the one fide by Elijah, on the part of Jehovah, and on the other by four hundred and fifty Priests, on the part of Baal, the test of all was, which of their Deities could command Fire to come down from heaven to confume the factifice, and the issue disgraced Baal, and destroyed all his Priests. And therefore, it is no rash conclusion, that the Ox's or Bull's head, was the hieroglyphical Emblem of Fire, perhaps Fire at the orb of the Sun.

W E know also that many of the Egyptians, and of the neighbouring nations worshipped Light; it was difficult to separate the idea of light from that of fire. Those that ferved the moon and planets had not fire for their object. The Persians, who worshipped fire, and eminently the body of the Sun, had Light, necessarily, in esteem, their beneficent principle. Oromassist, see Substantiate Statked of worshipping Light as idolatry. There were several temples in Egypt, and in Canaan, to the Light of the Sun; and in Egypt, as well as in Persia, the Lion was a sacred Emblem. Wherefore, it seems highly probable the Lion was used as the Symbol or Emblem of Light, as the Bull was made use of as the Emblem of Fire.

W E know, alfo, that the earlieft heathens took the Air, Wind, that thing which in the antient languages is expressed by a word fignifying, promiseously, Wind and Spirit, that invisible agent which we feel, and which performs fo many confiderable effects in nature without without being feen, for a Deity; that to it they aferibed infpiration; their Sybils, their deliverers of Oracles were inflated; futurities, the will of their God was difcovered, by the countenance of Clouds, and the flight of Birds, which were religiously observed by Augurs, in the Hebrew, Cloud-mongers; Thunder was the voice of their God, which was portentous, and much observed. Thunder was ascribed to the great Jove, the Thunderer, and the Eagle with the thunderbolt was his enfign; whence we may, pretty fafely, conclude that the Eagle, to the worshippers of the Air, represented, hieroglyphically, Air, Wind, Spirit.

IF the Deity, to give fome idea of himfelf from a fensible object, had made choice of the Heavens as the fenfible object, from which to take the imperfect idea of his immenfity, perfonality, and mannerof exiftence and operation; if, by the vaffners and extent of them,"--his immenfity was to be reprefented; if by fire, the first Person, ne--ceffarily and continually generating and fending forth light, the fecond-Perfon, and conftantly and neceffarily fupplied by dir, or Spirit, the third Person, the Trinity coexisting, and cooperating, for the support of the whole, and in aid of each other, was to be reprefented; then, upon difcovering this to mankind, the Heavens would become the type of Jehovah, the divine Effence; Fire would become the type of the fir/t Person, Light of the second, and Air, or Spirit of the third ; and whatever EMBLEMS, in kicroglyphical writing, were used to express these, as the names of the one, would, or might be used, for the appellations, or names of the other.

So that, if this refemblance, or reprefentation, were to be expreffed in ftone, wood, or metal, the emblems of Fire, Light, and Air, or Spirit, that is, from what has been faid, the Bull, the Lion, and the Eagle, ought to be conjoined together into the form of one Animal; and every body, who underflood the hieroglyghical emblems, would immediately think on the Heavens which they reprefented, and, from thence, raife to himfelf the intended image of the Trinity in the divine Essence.

Now we do know that the word SHEMIM, ufed always for the Heavens, in the facred langurge which God has chosen to express his Revelation in, is plural, as the other word ELOHIM is; that its natural fignification is Names, and that it has been often made use of to fignify the Deity. And if the Characters, or Powers in the Heavens have been chosen to point out, and express the Persons in the the Deity, we can perceive the reason why the Heavens have got the appellation of the Names, by way of eminence, as they denote, or are descriptive of, those facred Perfons.

AND we do, further, know that the first turn the antient heathens took from the worship of the true, the invisible, God, was to the worship of the Heavens, those Names; which can, pretty naturally, be accounted for, if they were accustomed to think on the Powers, or Characters in the Heavens with any facred regard, and to believe that they supported themselves, and all the rest of this system, by one unerring, perpetual, action and reaction upon themselves, and on every thing else, in the material world.

THIS defection from the knowledge and fervice of the true God began as early as the project at Babel. The fcheme, then, was to build a tower or temple to the Heavens; and, tho' the defign was then broken, by making the projectors fall out amongst themselves about the LITURGY, and form of Worship, which was confounding their language, yet it foon took place, in different families, and countries, tho' with different emblems, ceremonies, and fervices. Abraham, by the direction of God, left Ur of the Chaldees, where the rebellious fervice, probably to the Light, had begun; and was, as were his fon, and grandchild, after him, for many years, kept under the immediate direction of God, itinerant in regions that were then but thinly peopled, and with the inhabitants whereof they had but fmall intercourfe, to prevent the infection that might have come from communication with idolaters; and, by the immediate act of providence, his race was brought down to Egypt, and exceedingly multiplied there, under particular manners, and inflitutions, that kept them diftinct from the people of that great Empire; which, as it was one of the first mighty monarchies, fo was confessedly the most noted for the learning, and fuperflitious profession, of the pagan religion; and chofen therefore by the Deity as the fcene in which his wonders were to be wrought, for the confusion of idolatrous imagination, and for eftablishing the authority of himfelf, his Law-giver, and confequently his Laws, with the Ifraelitifb People.

As fubfituting the visible fimilitude in the room of the invisible God was the first, it was the most criminal, the most dangerous, abuse that ever crept into religion; and, therefore, the strongest, the most laborious, efforts, if one may be allowed to fay fo, were made by the Deity to correct, and prevent it; and to set men right in that particular; particular, Reafonings, of any kind, could not have had the fame weight to convince the idolatrous Egyptians, or the Ifraelites, who might have imbibed fome of their notions, that the Heavens, and in them the Fire, the Light, the Air, or Spirit, were no real Gods, and were but fervants of Jehovah, their maker; as the repeated miracles wrought by Mofes, the fervant of Jehovah, in the fight of both nations; giving animal life to inanimate matter; turning rods into ferpents; producing multitudes of frogs; turning water into blood; turning light into darknefs; making the air produce fwarms of noxious infects; inflicting difeafes, and death, on certain claffes, whilft others were fafe; dividing the fea; commanding fire, and cloud, to execute his command, &c. miracles which were, to all intents, fufficient to convince the Egyptians of their error, and to guard Ifrael againft falling into it.

AND, accordingly, we fee the point, principally, laboured in the writings left by Mo/es, is afferting to Jehovah the power, preeminence, and dominion, attributed by the pagans to the Heavens. Hence his books begin with the creation, and formation of those Heavens by the word of God; the history of the deftruction of the earth, by the flood, is minutely recorded; the constant claim of the Deity is to be confessed as the Creator of the Heavens and the Earth, and the giver of all the good things that were supposed to come, immediately, from them. The chief view of the Law of the two Tables, is to deny fervice to all beings but Jehovah; the professions of the faithful were that Jehovah made the Heavens; was the fovereign Lord and Master; and in those professions, the miracles in Egypt,  $\mathfrak{Sc}.$  are referred to, as the foundation of their belief and acknowledgment.

It calls for very particular attention that the first, and the grand mistakes in religion proceeded from taking literally, what was meant figuratively, or emblematically only; and fo denying, in effect, the fymbolical meaning, from which feveral impious abfurdities followed, terminating in abfolute infidelity, where fome fort of impertinent belief was not maintained by extravagant imaginations.

THE ridicule of this miftake appears very firong, in taking fymbolical representations for the Realities intended to be represented; whatever pretence a Revelation, recorded in words by writing, might have to be fo, literally, understood, fure it was extremely perverfe to take pictures only, for the original things, or perfons defigned to be exhibited by the pictures.

AND yet this folly we fee mankind fell into almost in every particular. The Elohim were reprefented by the Heavens, and thefe, again, in Sculpture, or Picture, by the Bull, the Lion, and the Eagle joined. The first who wandered from the truth mistook the Heavens, Fire. Light, and Air, or Spirit, for what they were intended to reprefent, the invifible Trinity; and as fuch worfhipped them, using the figures of the Bull, the Lion, and the Eagle, only as hieroglyphical reprefentations of those Powers, which they truly were intended to be. But their fucceffors, in process of time, forgetting the supposed influence of those Powers in the Air, or Heavens, and, observing religious fervice paid to the forms of those animals, made a fecond mistake, looked no more to the Heavens, as their Gods, but ftupidly imagined a Deity to be inherent in those graven, or molten, Images which they worfhipped, and ferved, and from whom they looked for favour, and protection; and, when those things became too abfurd to be credited, and formally defended, Imagination was fet to work, and produced fuch ridiculous fystems in refpect to the Deity, as endangered the lofing the knowledge, even, of the original Symbols, and helped to introduce, total Unbelief and Atheism.

IT was taking Symbols for Realities, that made men imagine a purifying quality in the blood of beafts; that made them fancy that Hecatombs flaughtered placated the Deity; and that God was delighted with the fmoke that arofe from the fat of burnt-offerings.

It was laying hold of the letter, and letting the meaning flip, that induced men to facrifice their firft-born, to fled in facrifice human blood; the blood of the firft-born was to atone; the feed of the woman was to relieve mankind from mifery; the firft-born were facred to God. Zealots to the letter, imagined the fruit, at leaft, the firft-fruit of the womb had this vertue, and therefore offered it, literally, to their Gods, which, at laft, made human facrifice fashionable.

IN fhort, looking at the external fymbols, and letter, and not at the apparent, certain, meaning of both, drove the heathens to all their follies; and first misled, and asterwards hardened, and confirmed, firmed, the  $\mathcal{J}ews$  in those abfurdities, under which they are ridiculous, and miferable, to this day.

As the practice of the earlieft heathens, who first apostatifed to the fervice of the Heavens, in fetting up the figures of the feveral animals, whereof the Cherubim was composed, for the fymbols, or emblems, of the different Powers in the Heavens, which they worshipped, is ftrong evidence what those figures were, originally, intended to represent: it becomes necessary for any one, who would have further statisfaction in this particular, to fearch the foriptures to fee whether, in the feveral appearances of the Deity therein related, there may not be fome characters fit to confirm, or destroy, the opinion that the figures in the Cherubim were the emblems of fire, light, and air, or spirit.

AND, upon due enquiry, it will be found that, almost, always when the manner of Jehovak's appearance is defcribed, the visible fymbol of his prefence was fire, or light, or air, or all three together: not to mention that the appearance of fire is generally, and, almost, neceffarily attended with that of light.

THE first appearance described is Gen. 15. where, to confirm the covenant to Abraham, the parts of the divided beasts, and the fowls, being set over against each other, the appearance of a smoaking furnace, and a lamp of fire passed between them. That this appearance contained fire, light, and air, or set pirit, is evident.

THE fecond appearance, of which the form is mentioned, was under the oaks of Mamre, Gen. 18. where the figure is not partize cularly deferibed, the probably it was human, or like to it; and all we can gather from this, is, that the appearance was under the form of three Perfons.

THE next appearance defcribed is that to Mofes, in the bufh, Exod. 3. what was exhibited to view was a burning bufh which was not confumed, and this exhibition could not poffibly be without light; whether it was attended with cloud, or fmoak, the text does not fay.

THE next emblem of the prefence of God, defcribed, is the pillar of fire, and cloud, that guided and guarded, the Ifraelites in the wildernefs; if light be allowed to the fire, in this exhibition, all the three are joined.

IMMEDIATELY after this we fee Jebovab giving the Law folemnly, from Sinai; he is faid, Exod. 19. 18. to have defeended upon upon it in fire: Mount Sinai was altogether on a fmoak; it was covered with a thick cloud, and there were on it thunders and lightnings; and Mofes takes notice, Deut. 4. 15. in cautioning the Ifraelites against graven images, and the making the fimilitudes of any creatures, to be worshipped as God; that on the day that Jehovah spoke to them in Horeb, out of the midst of the fire, they faw no manner of fimilitude; by which, the text shews, must be meant the fimilitude of any animal: Besides, that it is certain there must have been the appearance of fire, and light, from it as well as from the lightning, and the cloud which, naturally, denotes air, or spirit, whose peculiar language thunder is.

WHEN the tabernacle of the congregation was removed, and pitched without the camp, upon the people's rebellion whilft Mofes tarried yet in Horeb, the pillar of cloud defcended, and ftood at the door of the tabernacle, fo often as the Lord talked with Mofes; and all the people, upon feeing this cloud, worfhipped. Exod. 35.9, 10.

WHEN Moses defired to fee the way of the Lord, and Jehovah was to proclaim his name, he cauled his glory to pass by him, Exod. 33.22. Now if this glory of the Lord was of the same kind with that which filled the tabernacle, and temple, on many occasions, and which Ezekiel, in his account of the Cherubim, describes, it must have confisted of fire, light, and air, or spirit.

WHEN the tabernacle was fet up, Exod. 40. 34, 35. the cloud of the Lord covered the tent, and the glory of Jehovah filled the tabernacle. When Aaron bleffed the people, for the first time, upon entring upon his office, Levit. 9. 23. the glory of Jehovah appeared to all the people. When the temple was compleated, and the facred mufick had played, I Kings 8. 10, 11. and 2 Chron. 5. 13, 14. the cloud filled the house of Jehovah, so that the Priests could not stand to minister, by reason of the cloud: for the glory of Jehovah had filled the house of Jehovah. And 2 Chron. 7. 2. When Solomon had done praying, at the dedication of the temple, the glory of the Lord filled the house. And the Priests could not enter into the house of Jehovah, because the glory of Jehovah had filled Jehovah's house.

Now, if we examine what appearance this glory of Jehovah had, when he was, as one may fay, in perfon taking possible possible filling that the set of th fhould give the idea of the material thing, to which he, whose prefence that appearance denoted, was to be assimilated.

THE common notion of glory has fplendor, a glare of light attending it; and, when brought into fculpture, or painting, is figured like rays iffuing from the fun; and, in the paffages abovementioned, a cloud, another emblem, was attendant.

IN Ezekiel chap. 1. where the Cherub is definited, the glory of Jehovah is also ftrongly painted. The vision begins with a whirlwind, a great cloud, v. 4. and a fire infolding itself. v. 13. As for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was like burning coals of fire, and like the appearance of lamps: it went up anddown among the living creatures, and the fire was bright, and out of the fire went forth lightning. v. 26, 27, 28. The appearance of a Man, on the appearance of a throne; and the prophet faw, as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it : from the appearance of his loyns even upward, and from the appearance of his loyns even downward, he faw as it were the appearance of fire; and it had brightness round about. As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, fo was the appearance of the brightness round about. This, fays the prophet, was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord: and, when he faw it, he fell down upon his face. And chap. 10. v. 4. where the fame Cherubim are defcribed, the court is faid to have been full of the brightness of Jehovah's glory, whilst the house was filled with the cloud.

THIS defcription flews that fire, light, and cloud, were the principal, if not the only, ingredients in the appearance of the glory of Jehovah; and the preternatural appearance of light, flining from the skin of Moses's face, after the glory of Jehovah had passed by him, flews, pretty well, what flare light had in the composition of that glory, which the Apostle Paul seems to have understood, when writing to the Hebrews, chap. 1. he speaks of the brightness of the Father's glory, the express image of his Person.

BESIDES these appearances of the glory of the Lord, Jehovah acts in character, when Levit. 9. 23. pleased with the prietthood of Aaron he fends fire, the emblem of himself, out from his face, to burn the facrifice on the altar. When 2 Chron. 7. 1. Fire, upon the ending of Solomon's prayer, came down from heaven, and confumed the burnt-offering. And when 1. Kings 13. 38. the decision was was made, as above-mentioned, between Jehovah, and Baal, by fire from keaven.

THESE being, perpetually, the fignals of Jehovah's prefence, the fymbols made ufe of to denote his appearance; thefe having been, jointly, or feverally, the objects of the earlieft pagans religious fervices, the Pagans acknowledging the bull, the lion, and the eagle, as the emblems of thefe their divinities, which, in length of time, they mittook for what they were intended only to reprefent; and the bull, the lion, and the eagle, joined in the appearance of one living creature, having been confectated, as one may fay, in the Cherubim, for the refidence of the prefence of God in the Holy of Holies, one can hardly doubt that the figures, joined in the Cherubim, which were the emblems of fire, light, and air, or fpirit, the ordinary fimilitude under which the Deity ufually appeared, were intended to reprefent thofe characters, or perfons, in the divine Effence, that fire, light, and air, or fpirit, refembled.

WHATEVER occasion man might have had for the knowledge of the diffinction of perfons in the Deity, before the FALL, yet it feems certain the manner of his falvation, after his defection, could not have been imparted to him without revealing that truth, undifcoverable by the light of nature. He could not poffibly know how, or upon what account, his fins were to be pardoned, and himfelf reinftated in the favour of God, without being told that the Deity confifts of three Persons; that of those three, pursuant to a covenant made before the CREATION, the fecond was to take on him flefh, and in the form of man to fuffer, and thereby atone for the fins of mankind; and that the third was to keep a communication with the fouls of men, for their guidance and comfort. And man could not poffibly keep up, with any certainty, the memory of this Revelation without some memorial, some symbolical act, or thing, to preferve it; or look upon fuch fymbol, knowing the fenfe of it, without gratefully confeffing his obligations to those divine Perfons, to whom he owed his being, his comfort, his falvation.

A Christian, the most important article of whose Creed it is that the Deity was joined to the humanity, that the Word was made flesh, that a Person in Jehovah became the Son of Man, and a Man, born of a Virgin, became the Son of Jehovah, will not feruple, when he is told that in the representation of the Deity exhibited under symbols in the Cherubin, for the instruction and comfort of mankind, the figure figure of a Man is added to thefe that reprefent the Trinity; that this figure of a Man is placed at the right hand of that emblem that reprefents the Father, the first Perfon, the Fire, and that it is, in a particular manner, conjoyned with the Lion, the fecond Perfon, the Light. He firmly believes what these figures, thus explained, reprefent; and must think it agreeable to the great condescension, and goodness of the merciful God, to acquaint man, from the beginning, with what fo nearly concerned him, and what, without Revelation, he could poffibly have no idea of.

THE bieroglyphical reprefentation in the Cherubim must not be confidered, fingly, from the form of it; but to that must be added the rank it had in the tabernacle, and the ceremony, or emblematical action in which it was concerned.

IT has been already observed that the Cherubim were to be made out of the fame pure gold that composed the mercy-feat, which they were to cover with their wings; and all that is deferibed to us, further, of their pofture is that, flanding one at each end of the mercy feat, their faces were to look towards each other, and towards the mercyliat.

THIS mercy-feat, the space between the two Cherubim, is defcribed, particularly, as the place of the refidence of the Deity, and of his appearance; he was to inhabit the Cherubim, or between them; and he was to appear, there, in the cloud, and to declare his will from thence.

BESIDES this, there was a flated folemn ceremony to be performed, once a year, on the day of Expiation, before the mercyfeat : the Priest was to bring within the vail the blood of the finoffering, and with it to make atonement for all the people, by fprinkling of the blood upon the mercy-feat, and feven times before it; and this blood, fo fprinkled, is faid to expiate.

THE atoning blood, in this highest act of the Mofaical institution, was fprinkled on that place, the mercy-feat, towards which the feveral faces of the Cherubim were turned : and, if they were to fee, they had no object to look at, on this folemn day of expiation, but the Priest in the holy garment, the emblem of the second Perfon, the Light, fprinkling this blood on, and towards, the mercyfeat; which could hardly fail to raife the idea, that the blood, fo iprinkled, was the object the divine Perfons, whom these figures р reprefented, represented, looked upon, as the propitiation, the ransom, the atonement.

AND if it was neceffary, towards making this emblem compleat, to reprefent all the Perfons as looking upon, and accepting this blood, then it became neceffary to make two feveral Cherubs, and to place them at different ends of the mercy-feat, that the face of each figure might be turned towards the fpot, the blood was to be fprinkled on; becaufe had there been no more than one Cherub, two only of the four faces could have been directed to the place on which the blood was to be fprinkled; befides that, the fignificancy of the circumftance of their faces looking towards each other, which deferves a feparate confideration, would have been loft.

NOTHING is more certain than that, under the Mofaick œconomy, the Deity was to refide, to dwell, to appear, in the midft of the people, in the place where he was to put his Name; the place where, and where only, in exclusion of all others, facrifice was to be offered, the altar was to be fet up, and every other ceremonial, or emblematical act of their religion was to be performed, and more particularly the higheft in, or between, the Cherubim.

WHATEVER religious act was done, in this place, is faid to be done before Jehovah, in the Hebrew, always, before the faces of Jehovah.

Now, if the feveral faces of the Cherubim are taken to reprefent the Perfons in the Deity, and therefore to be called the faces of Jehovah, the reafon of this phrafeology will be obvious, as the phrafe it felf will be fignificant.

It is not to be diffembled that the Hebrew words, translated *be*fore the faces, are often made use of to fignify before, or in prefence of, without regard to plurality of faces; but it deferves enquiry how fo ftrange a phraseology came to take place.

AND it feems to call for very particular attention that, before the Mofaick inflitution, and, indeed, from the first Revelation, the prefence of the Deity is represented as confined, with respect to religious acts, to a place, and what is done, in that place, is faid to be done before the faces of Jebovab.

Cain is faid to have gone out from the faces of Jehovah, and to have dwelt in the land of Nod, to the eaftward of Eden. Now, if by the faces of Jehovah is not meant fome particular place of his immediate prefence, and if, on the contrary, his prefence, as we tranflate late it, in general, is underftood, the thing will not be true; Cain could not convey himfelf out of the prefence of God, which is every where, but he might remove from that place which he chofe, in a particular manner, for his refidence, in the celebration of religious acts.

IN like manner, the pot of manna, Exod. 16. is ordered to be laid up, and was accordingly laid up, before the faces of Jehovak, before the Testimony, long before the Mosaick tabernacle, and ark was made, or crected. Laying it up any where would, in one fense, have been laying it up before the Lord; but Aaron understood the meaning of the expression to be, to lay it up before the Testimony, where the faces of the Cherubin were.

NOR need any one feruple admitting the force of this laft obfervation; for it is evident from this, as well as other texts, that the If-raelites had an ark, and a tabernacle, confectated to the refidence of Jehovah, and defined to religious fervice, before the Mofaick tabernacle was reared up.

UPON the provocation of the Ifraelites, in making the golden calf, fehovab being highly difpleafed, the tabernacle was by Mofes taken out of the center, and removed far from the camp, and was called the tabernacle of the congregation, where fehovab defeended in a cloud, to give directions to Mofes. Now this happened, in the interval, between Mofes's receiving inftructions for building the tabernacle that was made in the wildernefs, and his giving orders for the contribution for that work; which evinces that the Ifraelites had, upon their going out of Egypt, a tabernacle for Jehovab, diffinguished by his prefence, and the fymbols of it, before that reared by Mofes was prepared.

THO' the having a tabernacle for Jehovah fufficiently imply the having an ark, with the mercy-feat and cherubim, the furniture of it, yet there is other evidence to fhew that the Ifraelites actually had an ark, different from that made by Mofes. For when the ark, which had been taken by the Philiftines, was locally at Kirjath-jearim, Saul being at Gibeah of Benjamin, 1 Sam. 14. 18. orders Ahijah to bring him thither the ark of God; and the penman of that book adds a remark, for at that time there was an ark of God, befides that with the children of Ifrael. And when the ark, made by Mofes, after having been carried from Kirjath-jearim, was lodged in Zion, Uriah, who had left Joab at the fiege of Rabbah, being prefied to go to his P 2 house and to his wife, excuses himsfelf, alledging it was not proper for him to take to much ease, when the Ark, and Israel, and Judah abode in tents, and Yoab, and the King's fervants, were encamped in the open fields. 2 Sam. 11. 11.

AND it feens highly probable that the Ark, thus brought to Saul, when in camp, and the Ark that was with Joab, at the fiege of Rabbab, was the fame that belonged to the tabernacle, which the Ifraelites carried from Egypt with them; becaufe, after the building of Mofes's tabernacle, it was unlawful to have made any new one, in imitation of it.

IF it is asked, whence the Ifraelites had an ark, a tabernacle, Cherubim, and the prefence, or the fuppofed prefence, of Jehovah in, or between, those Cherubim? toward the refolution of that queflion it must be confidered, whence the antient nations had their Cifta, their Arks, their Images, their Teraphim, their Tabernacles, their Temples; because the origin of both will, very probably, be found the fame.

THE account, given us by Mofes, of the publication of the Gofpel, after the Fall, is very fhort, and concife, tho' the Revelation may, in itfelf, have been very full, and explicite. Hopes of mercy given are recorded in that fingle fentence, the feed of the woman fhall bruife the head of the ferpent : and we hear of no other fymbolical thing, inflitution, or exhibition, except only the placing, or inhabiting, the Cherubims, to the caftward of Eden, upon man's being removed out of it.

THE Jews, who have mifconftrued the Angel Jehovah into a created angel, have thought fit, here, to underftand, by the Cherabins, two of the fame fort of Angels, who had got a flaming fword, amongft them, to frighten Adam from re entring Eden, and meddling with the fruit of the tree of life; and this montrous flory they have made out of a text that, neceffarily, means no fuch thing, and may fairly be conftrued to a fenfe big with the most important information to mankind.

FOR, in the first place, what the Jews and we translate to keep the way of the tree of life, with intent to prevent the coming at it, may as properly be rendered to observe, or for observing, and so difcovering, or finding out, the way to the tree of life; and every body knows that the word way of heaven, way to life, in the Greek, as well as Hebrew learning, means to arrive at happinels.

IN the next place, what we commonly translate flaming-fword flands in two feveral Nouns, not joined by conftruction, flame and fword, which last means nothing more particular than a killing weapon.

AND in the laft place, the word we translate placed Cherubims is, almost always, in every other text translated inhabited; and whether you translate it placed, or inhabited, the next word ought to be translated the Cherubims, as things or emblems well known to those for whom Moses wrote. So that Jehovah's placing or inhabiting these Cherubims, where there was also the appearance of fire, and fword, was the method, chosen by him, to make the way to the tree of life kept, or observed.

Now, as the eftablished method for atonement and propitiation, the known way to the tree of life, was by employing fire in burntfacrifice, and the fword in fhedding blood, both which must be done before the faces of Jehovah, reliding in or between the Cherubinn, what hinders us to conclude that the exhibition mentioned by Moles was, to the symbolical inftitution and fervice, afterwards effablished amongst men, the same that the patterns shewed to Moses, and to David were of the tabernacle, and temple, that afterwards were erected; and that Adam, and, in him, mankind was thereby inftructed to fhed blood, and offer burnt-facrifice, before the faces of fuch fumbolical figures as were then reprefented? Surely, if the fhedding of blood, and offering by fire, were then inflituted, as we are pretty fure they were, the manner would also be directed. And, as we know, from the hiftory of Cain, that Jehovah chofe a place for his more immediate prefence, called his faces, we cannot poffibly doubt that directions must be given with what fymbols that place was to be adorned, and how it was to be diffingnifhed : nor can we reaionably hefitate to pronounce that the fymbol of his prefence was the Cherubim, the place where, in the Jewish economy, he most certainly dwelt, and where in the very text in queftion, he is faid to inhabit.

IF then this emblematical reprefentation was exhibited, immediately after the Fall, to express and keep in perpetual memory the Revelation of mercy to man, by the blood and fuffering of that perfect human facrifice, who was to be joined to the fecond Perfon in the Deity, and to redeem and govern those that ferved, and trusted in him, we can clearly see the extent of God's goodness from the beginning, ginning, univerfally, to all mankind; and we can perceive how the Jews came to have a tabernacle, and an ark, with proper emblems, before that made by Mofes; and how the Nations came by their fimbols, of the like nature; which in process of time they mistook, mistapplied, and altered, when their corruption and imagination had once led them aftray.

For if, in that emblematical fervice, the fymbol of the prefence of the Deity was neceffary, towards performing facrifice, as well as the emblem of the great facrifice, the great interceffor, &c. then it became neceffary for men, when, by multiplying, they were forced to extend their quarters, and to people diffant regions, to carry fome fymbol of the divine prefence along with them, in order to the facrificing acceptably, every nation, agreeing in the fame fervice, muft have one; and every family, fo long as the right of exercifing the priefthood remained with the first-born, must also have one, elfe that right would be of no benefit; and if they lived in the itinerant, Nomade way, they muft have a tent, or tabernacle, for placing those fymbols in, as well as means of transporting them: as, on the other hand, if their feats were fixed, so as to fuffer them to crect houses for themfelves, they naturally would find house, temples, for those (ymbols.

NOTHING was more common than Houshold-Gods among the antients. Laban had his Teraphim, which he calls his Gods, and about which he was extremely follicitous; Rachel had no lefs refpect for them than he. The Heathens carried their Gods along with them, whitherfoever they went. The idolatrous Ifraelites had, probably, in the wildernefs tabernacles for their Gods Chiun, and Remphan. The caufe of making the golden Calf was, probably, compliance with this cultom. Aneas is commended for the pious care of carrying his Gods, his Dii Penates, from Troy to Italy, tho' what the form of them was is not known. Every family had their Penates, their Dii Lares, tho' in latter time they forgot what form thefe antiently were of. Teraphim, Penates, Lares, are all plural names for the reprefentations of those Family-Gods; and, laying those circumflances together, it is impossible to doubt that the making thefe reprefentations, amongft the different nations and kindreds, owed its origin to one and the fame caufe.

It was because of the many corruptions introduced into the facred fervice, in practice as well as in opinion, that the Jewish œconomy was instituted; and it was because the permission of every head of a family family to be Prieft, for his own houfe, and to facifice according to his own will, had introduced the greateft uncertainty, as well as error, that the first act towards establishing the Jewish liturgy was the abrogating that right, the depriving the first-born of all pretence to shed blood, and transferring that right to the family of Aaron.

It was for the fame reafon, and to the fame intent, that facifice of all forts was prohibited, except before the faces of Jehovah in the tabernacle first, and, then, in the temple. In the wildernefs no Ifraelite could lawfully kill a clean animal, for private use, in any other place except before the tabernacle; and tho', when the people had fixed feats in the land of Canaan, distant from the faces of Jehovah, they were permitted to kill of the flocks, or of the herds, for domestick use, provided they did not eat the blood or the fat, yet fill, under the strictes that might ensue.

THE very prohibition, together with fubfituting the Levites in place of the first-born, and the change that was thereby introduced in the precedent practice, which all mankind but the  $\mathcal{J}ews$  continued in, shews fufficiently what was lawful and regular before that prohibition; and the circumstances, above taken notice of, fufficiently shew the occasion and meaning of it.

MUCH of the fame kind, and nearly for the fame reafon, is the prohibition to make graven or molten images to represent Jehovah, to fall down before them, or worship them; to erect altars, statues, or pillars, for religious fervice. Abraham, &c. built altars; Jacob anointed a ftone, which he had fet up, and called it Bethel; and doubtlefs the practice of both was laudable, and, but for the prohibition in the institution given by Moses, each might have been lawfully practiced by the Ifraelites in Canaan, as well as their facrificing before the faces of Jehovah might have been imitated. But, after all religious fervice, the whole fymbolical reprefentation of the grace of God to mankind was confined to the tabernacle and temple, then what was lawful to be done, elfewhere, became unlawful; and, as it was impoffible, after that period, to facrifice any where but before the faces of Jehovah, the symbols of his prefence, in the holy-place, it became unfit to make, or to have in reverence, those fymbols (which were only expressive, as they were joined with facrifice) an y where elfe, except when a Prophet had immediate direction, or in cafes of necessity.

THE prohibition, then, is to Ifrael, that they flould not make unto themfelves graven images, the fimilitudes of any thing in the heavens above, or in the earth beneath,  $\dot{C}c$ . that they flould not bow down to them, nor ferve them; that they flould not take upon themfelves, wantonly, to affimilate God to what their imaginations might fuggeft to them he was like; by the practice whereof mankind had already run into fo many ridiculous, and miferable errors. But this prohibition does not, in any degree, imply that the Deity might not continue the ufe of the facred fymbol of his perfonality and grace, in the merciful act of redeeming mankind, in the Holy of Holies; no more than the inhibition to facrifice, at large, prevented facrificing in the temple. And, if it be faid that the actual inftitution of facrifice, at the altar, flews the prohibition to facrifice was not abfolute, it may alfo be faid that the command to frame the Cherubim is as exprefs, as that to burn Holocaufts at the altar.

It is, indeed, true that the prohibition extends to prohibit all religious worfbip, even to the facred emblems in the holy place; an extravagance into which the idolaters had fallen, and that may be a main motive for forbidding the very making, or having, fuch emblems in private hands; but then there was no danger of that abufe in the temple: the (imbols were placed there not as the objects of worfbip, but as defcriptive, in fome degree, of the manner of the act of grace, as it was to be brought about by the perfons in the Deity, for mankind. The presence, that was to be worshipped, was to be looked for between those symbols, or emblems, upon the mercy-feat; and the cloud, and the glory iffuing from it, called away the attention from those representations. Besides that, to prevent abuses from imagination, and all attempts of worshipping, these facred figures were kept in the innermost part of the tabernacle, and temple, to be approached only once a year, and that by the High-Prieff, on the day of Expiation.

THAT this was the apprehension of the Israelites, of those times, is evident from the conduct of their fucceflors, who could not well fail to be acquainted with their notions; and who might think that ordinances of this kind, intended to take place in a flate of quiet and tranquility, when all the people had free access to the tabernacle, or temple, might be superfeded, in case of absolute necessity, when the pious could not have access to present themselves at those places.

Micah

Micah, who lived in the time of the Judges, certainly feared  $\mathcal{J}e$ hovah; the filver, belonging to his mother, was dedicated to  $\mathcal{J}e$ hovah, to make an Ephod, and Teraphim,  $\mathfrak{C}c$ . when he fucceeded in getting a Prieft, to his mind, he concluded that he was certain  $\mathcal{J}ehovah$  would do him good; and this Ephod, and Teraphim, evidently were prophetick.

His fcheme, then, manifeftly was not to revolt from Jehovah, nor to ferve idols, or other Gods; but, whilft the confusion and oppreffion of Ifrael made it impossible to attend at Shilo, to have a house of God in his own family, with facred fymbols, and a Priest, who, before the faces of Jehovah, in that place could make atonement by facrifice, whilst communication with Shilo was obstructed.

H E, therefore, made an Ephod, and Teraphim, in imitation of the approved fymbols; and, having them fet up, had Jud. 17. 5. Beth Elohim, a house of God: the Translators, imagining that the Teraphim represented falfe Gods, have rendered the words Beth Elohim a house of Gods; tho', chap. 18. 31. they render the very fame words, when applied to the tabernacle in Shilo, the house of God.

As the fervice, for which this Ephod, and Teraphim, this houfe of God was intended, could not be performed without a Prieft, Micab, who it feems was not himfelf a first-born, confectated one of his fons, probably the eldeft, for that office, for want of one more fit; but meeting, at last, with a Levite, he engaged him to ferve in that station, and confectated him, in full belief that this action would be acceptable to Jehovah.

AND, accordingly, we fee Jehovah was propitious to this pious, tho'irregular, defign. The Ephod, and Teraphum, confulted by the Danites about the fuccels of their undertaking, returned a true anfwer; which fo far raifed the effeem of the Danites for those facred Symbols, that they robbed Micah of them, and set them up in their own country, where they continued in reputation till the Captivity.

Micab, complaining of the injury done him in taking from him the Teraphim, fays they had taken away his Elohim, his God. It is difficult, if at all poffible, to imagine that Micab, who fet up thofe figures to do fervice to Jehovah, could have meant any more than that the Teraphim were the Symbol, or reprefentation, of the Elohim, neceffary to be used in the chief act of religious fervice; and, if that fhall be the construction, the refemblance between Teraphim in private vate fervice, before the Mofaick Law, and Cherubim, in the publick fervice, after it, is pretty obfervable.

It was, in all appearance, for the fame reason, and to the fame end, that Gideon, a servant of the true God, who had seen the Angel Jehovah, to whom Jehovah had spoken, to whom, and by whom, Jehovah had wrought wonders, made an Ephod of the golden spoils of the Midianites, and set it up in Ophrah, his city, whither the Ifraelites, in process of time, ran a whoring after it, and where it became a fnare to Gideon, and to his house.

THAT this Ephod had Teraphim, and all the proper appurtenances, as Micah's had, attending upon it, is not to be doubted; and it is remarkable, that Gideon's act is not cenfured for any inherent malignity in it, but only for the confequences of it; as the Ephod he fet up, in process of time, debauched the people, and became a fnare to him, and to his houfe.

THESE inflances, pretty plainly, fhew that Teraphim were no more than a copy of the original Cherubim, applied to the fame uses that the Cherubim were on the mercy-feat: and as all mankind agree, from many clear proofs, that the Teraphim were images, or reprefentations of what the antients took to be expressive of their Deity, it can hardly be questioned that the Cherubims were intended for the fame purpose.

SUPPOSING this to have been the cafe; as the very exhibition must have been intended to represent Trinity in the Deity, and the share each Person had in the falvation of man, it is impossible the Jews could have rejected the belief of the Trinity, and with it the Meffiah upon his advent, fo long as they retained the memory, and the understanding, of that hieroglyphical representation. But as it was fixed in Providence that they fhould disbelieve the one, and reject the other, their wild imaginations, whilft the figures remained in the temple, led them to neglect all reflection upon them, and to run after falfe Gods; and this neceffary piece of knowledge, towards understanding the fystem of grace, dropt fo totally out of their heads, or rather they had framed notions fo contrary to it, that, upon their return from the captivity, the Ark and Cherubim had no room in their temple; tho' these were the very kernel of all their religious ceremonies, and tho' the knowledge of the figures of the Cherubian was preferved by Ezekiel, a Prophet allowed by themfelves to be infpired, as the dimensions and fabrick of the mercy-feat was by Mofes. Тнат

THAT the flutting up those figures in the Sanctum fanctorum might have contributed to the loss of the knowledge of their form, amongst the  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , may be true; but then, if they had not been deferibed by Ezekiel, that loss would have been total, and irreparable; and we, as well as they, should be deprived of the benefit of that representation, to evidence the original and permanent design of the merciful Deity; but as the loss of the ideas, which ought to have refulted from that representation, answered the end of God in the hardness of the  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , fo the preservation of those facred figures, by Ezekiel, ferves to convict the  $\mathcal{J}ews$  of that hardness, to render them inexcusable for their infidelity; and, at the same time, to confirm, and illustrate the faith of Christians.

THE form, and the meaning of the reprefentation in the *Cheru*bim is not the only piece of ufeful knowledge the  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , to whofe cuftody the faceed oracles were committed, have loft as to themfelves; tho', in preferving the faceed books, they have providentially faved them for the benefit and inftruction of those who were called, to be the people of God, in their flead.

It has been already observed, that there is a particular emphasis, which the  $\mathcal{F}ews$  will not see in the plural Elohim, used always in foripture to fignify God; and it is uncontestable, that the word itself carries some idea in it descriptive of some character some relation, the Being described bears to Man.

THE word Jehovah the Septuagint translates Kúpios, and we, after it, Lord; becaufe of the delicacy of the original interpreters, who might think it fome fort of prophanation to translate that facred word, and make it common in its known meaning. Neither Jew nor Chriftian doubts that Jehovah expresses the Essence that necessarily exists; and every body knows that it does not mean what Kúpios properly fignifies; the Greek word is a faithful and just translation of Adoni, which the superstitious Jews have placed in the room of Jehovah; it fignifies Dominus, Lord, Master, but carries nothing in it of the idea of the Original.

T'HE idea refulting from the word Kúpios, Lord, is relative, and bears a particular regard to fubjects, fervants, without which the idea of Lord cannot fubfift; but the idea arifing from the word Jehovah is abfolute, bearing no relation to any thing but itfelf, an. ftanding fixed, and determined, by itfelf, fubfifting tho' nothing be fides did exift.

AND, therefore, we can reafonably fay my Lord, thy Lord, his Lord, our Lord, their Lord, the Lord of the land, &c. and those expressions are often used in scripture; but we cannot fay my Jehovah, thy Jehovah, &c. and in fact there is no such expression in the whole facred book : and, when we translate my Lord, thy Lord, &c. the word translated is never Jehovah, but always Adoni, or some other word of the same fignification.

A s we difcover the idea conveyed by Jehovah to be abfolute, fo we perceive the idea implyed in Elohim to be relative by the ufe of it; nothing is more common than my, thy, our, their, his, Elohim, which never is faid of Jehovah; and, as the word has fome fignification of relation, the Translators ought to have expressed it by a word that bore fome fuch fenfe.

BUT as they have erred in rendring the abfolute word Jehovah by the word Lord, which carries an idea fignificant of relation; fo they have erred on the other hand by rendring the word Elohim  $\Theta_{\varepsilon \delta s}, \Theta_{\varepsilon \delta t}, God, Gods$ ; which, fo far as we know by the derivation affigned for it, has nothing fignificant in it, at leaft carries no idea of relation to us, or to any other thing.

IF the word  $\Theta_{eds}$ , or the word God, have no fignificant meaning in themfelves, and are made use of, as founds, only to raife the idea of the eternal Being; then the applying that word by the relatives my, thy,  $\mathcal{C}c$ . is improper; the eternal Being, absolutely confidered; has no more relation to one, than to another; and, if the term  $\Theta_{eds}$ had originally any fignification of relation, by all we can different from the Greek antiquities, it was lost long before the Septuagint translation; nor do we know what the precise meaning of the Saxon word God was, other than to denote the fupreme beneficent Being.

THE  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , therefore, ought to have translated the word  $\mathcal{J}e-hovah$  by a word of the fame fignification, or at leaft to have rendered it totidem literis, if they could not find a word of the fame import; and they ought not to have translated it by a word that has another and a different meaning; and they ought not to have translated Elohim, which most certainly had a fignification of relation, by a word which had no fignification at all of relation affixed to it. On the contrary, they ought to have kept up, in the translation, to the true meaning of the word, or to have retained the Hebrew term, totidem literis, in the translation, as they did in proper names; for then, tho' they must have left men in the dark, they would not have misled them, nor done the mischief they have done to their fucceffors.

WITHOUT

WITHOUT enquiring whether the lofs, or the concealing, of the meaning of this word proceeded from folly, or faultinefs, or from a mixture of both, in the  $\mathcal{J}ews$ , it is highly neceffary to fearch, in order to the recovery of it; knowing the genius of the Hebrew language to be fuch, that fignificant words are framed from roots that yield fome certain, fixed, idea, and thereby convey a determined meaning.

In looking over the radical words of the Hebrew language one finds the root Elab to mean an Oath, or Adjuration, the Execration made to affect the breaker of a covenant; and the genius of the language certainly admits the word Elab to be used, from that, to fignify a perfon that bath taken upon him this oath, and Elohim to denote more perfons become fubject to it, or entring into covenant, or agreement, together.

THAT Elohim should be formed, from this root, to fignify perfons under the obligation or execution of an oath, may seem, at first fight, somewhat hard; but that notion will become more familiar when one confiders that Jehovak, throughout the faced scriptures, is faid on many occasions, in confirmation of any promise, or covenant, relating to a future event, to fwear, to fwear by kimifelf, to fwear as Jehovah liveth, in order to create absolute certainty, and reliance on the performance.

WHY Jehovah is thus reprefented as taking an oath, and what the nature and manner of that oath may be, merits a diffined confideration; but fince, in fact, he reprefents himfelf to us in that light, as binding his promifes by oath, we may cafily conceive why he may choofe to be called, and confidered, as the God bound by oath, the Being folemnly engaged under an immutable obligation, by those who are to believe in, and rely on his promifes.

THO' we have no footflep, fo far as I know, left of this fignification, in the terms which the Greeks, or Romans, or other later heathens, made use of to fignify the Deity, yet the Greeks had their Jupiter " $O_{pxtos}$ , and the Romans their Jupiter Fæderator; and nothing was more common, amongst those heathens, than the notion that the fupreme God could bind himself by oath; may they deferibe, with fictitious circumstances, the particular oath that was immutable. Here, again, is an inftance of a very extraordinary notion, very far from being deducible from the light of nature, pickt up, and maintained universally, amongst the most antient nations we know; which tallies universally.

wonderfully with what the facred book, of which they knew nothing, exhibits; and muft, therefore, have flowed from the fame original.

IF we admit that Elohim carries the notion of Fæderatores, Beings or Perfons in Alliance, bound by oath to make their engagement effectual, then we evidently fee why they may, are, and ought to be, called my, our, their, &c. Elohim; why Jehovah deferibes himfelf by the title of the Elohim of Abraham, of Ifaac, of Jacob, of Ifrael; why they call upon him as their Elohim; why, in their praifes, they aferibe to their Elohim power, goodnefs, faithfulnefs, beyond the Elohim of other nations; and why the leading encouragement to the Ifraelites, to do well, is, that Jehovah is, or will be, their Elohim, and they are, or fhall be, to him a peculiar people; as, on the other hand, if they broke their covenant, the Elah, the oath or execution would reach them.

A N D, furely, if Jehovah was pleafed to make, or to reprefent himfelf as making, a covenant for the benefit of mankind, or of any particular people, by which he was unalterably bound to redeem and preferve them, on their performing certain conditions, the moft kind, and, at the fame time, the moft ufeful appellation he could choofe to be addreffed to by, is that of Elohim, in the notion of Fæderator; becaufe it could not be pronounced, with attention, without raifing the moft thankful fentiments of the mercy and goodnefs of God, joined to the ftrongeft confidence in his favour; and, at the fame time, warning the party of the danger of tranfgreffing, by non-compliance with the conditions to which he, on his part, was bound.

IF Elohim was a term peculiar to Jehovah, as God of Ifrael, with whom he plainly appears to have been in covenant, the reafon of that appellation would be pretty obvious; but fo it happens, that he is called the Elohim of the whole Earth; and, in the defcription of the Creation, the works performed by the Eternal are faid to be done by the Elohim, and all the antient nations admitted the term Elohim as defcriptive of their God. So that it will be a flrong objection against this sense of the word Elohim, if no reasonable account can be given of an earlier covenant than that with Abraham, and if that covenant did not extend to all mankind.

WHOEVER believes that there are three perfons in the Deity, whereof one became bound to join himfelf to humanity, and perform compleat compleat righteoufnels, and give compleat fatisfaction for the fins of mankind; one became bound to affift man, thus redeemed, to do his duty, and to reform his heart; and one became bound to accept of this fatisfaction, and, upon receiving it, to admit man to fellow fhip and favour; will not feruple to allow that, before even the creation, a covenant, or agreement was made to this purpole between the facred three, in the event of man's falling: and he will be the lefs ferupulous to admit this, when he confiders feveral texts that fuppofe it, particularly the 110th Pfalm, v. 4. which fays, fehovab hath fworn, and will not repent, thou art a Prieft for ever, after the order of Melchizedek.

Bur, whatever may be thought of this; as none, who confiders and believes the feriptures, can doubt that this covenant was made known to the first man, on the fall, if that term Elohim was confecrated for his information and comfort, it would pass current amongst all mankind, his defeendants; and that would fufficiently authorize Moses, in deferibing the creation, to make use of the term Elohim, afcribing to Jehovah the Elohim, upon whose fidelity all mankind were to depend for falvation, the creation of this fystem, and of man.

AND tho' Mofes does not, formally, relate that Jehovah acquainted man, immediately upon the fall, of a covenant made for his falvation; yet feveral passages, as recorded by him, shew that mankind had early knowledge of this covenant. For, in speaking to Noah, both before and after the flood, Jehovah fays he will establish his covenant with Noah, and with his feed; not using the word that is, commonly, translated to make a covenant, which would have been done if no covenant had been made before; but making choice of an expression that presupposed a covenant, formerly made, and known to be made to Noah, who was made fure he was to reap, after that declaration, the benefit of it.

AND if one enters into the belief that this covenant (which gave birth to the appellation Elohim) was made by the Elohim, from the beginning, and was intimated to mankind, upon the fall, when the purpofe of mercy was first revealed; and when, for explaining and recording that purpofe of grace, the whole emblematical institution was appointed, and the Cherubim were exhibited, he will readily admit that the position of the two Cherubs, with their faces looking towards each other, and at the mercy-feat, where the blood for atonement atonement was to be fprinkled, might reprefent the Elohim, as parties in the act for making a covenant, looking and relying on each other for the performance, and regarding the blood, which was the emblem of the confideration for which man was to be redeemed: and this opinion he will the more readily give into, when he recollects that the ark, which fupported the Mercy-Seat and the Cherubim, the principal emblems of the Jewish religion, is most commonly called the Ark of the Covenant.

As the Jews cannot be pardoned the losing the fense of the word Elohim, they can hardly be forgiven their plain endeavour to hide the original meaning of the word, translated, covenant.

THAT Berith, the word fo translated, does not, in its original fense, figuify covenant, is evident from this; that the formal phrase made use of to fignify the making a covenant is, precisely, to cut off, or flay, Berith; much in the same way as icere, percutere, ferire, fadus, is, amongst the Romans, to fignify the making a covenant.

Berith, therefore, in its original fignification denotes fomething that was to be cut off, to be flain; and Mofes Exod. 24. 8. after having, as the fymbol of the covenant, concluded between Jehovah and the People, divided the blood of the facrifice into two equal parts; and, after having fprinkled the one half on the altar, fprinkled the other half on the people, faying, behold the blood of Berith, which Jehovah hath cut off with you, concerning all thefe words. and Zech. 9. 11. Prifoners are fet free by the blood of the covenant, Berith.

THE latin Literati very truly affign the rife of the phrase ferire fædus, when they fay, that in all leagues, covenants, and agreements, it was the antient and original cuftom to flay fome victim, to facrifice; whence, mentioning the folemn act, the flaying the victim, in common usage came to fignify the whole act of making a league to which it was applied: But they fail in affigning an adequate reason for the ceremony of flaying any animal, at treaties, which again muft have given rife to the form of fpeech in queftion.

It has been already observed, that the blood of the Redeemen, who, in due time, was to be cut off, was the confideration of the original covenant between the Elohim, and between them and man; and the cutting off, and sprinkling the blood of a type, a creature substituted in the room of the Redeemen, till his real advent, was the Symbol of that Covenant used, even by Jekovah, in making Covenants with men, as in the instance at Single; and, therefore, used by all all men when they entred into folemn agreements with each other. Cutting off a creature, then, in a particular manner, or under a particular character, being the fymbol of that important covenant, it is no great wonder that men, in their folemn engagements with each other, fhould make use of that facred act; and that faying, fhortly. that such creature, by such name or character, was cut off, should, in common usage, fignify that a covenant was made.

THO' these reflections may give some reasonable satisfaction why cutting off, or flaying, a victim was used in making covenants, yet it is still necessary to enquire what particular character the thing, called Berith, bore to diffinguish it from common victims in ordinary facrifices, and to appropriate it to the use of binding covenants; fince there is no appearance, after the most accurate fearch, that Berith was the name of any fort of animal used in facrifice.

IN examining carefully the Old Testament two passages, and no more, are to be met with where the Jews have not ventured to translate the word Berith covenant, but have been necessfarily obliged by the context to give it its true, original, fignification; tho' to divert the Reader's attention, and to prevent his making any inferences from the fense of the word, in these texts, they have, in an arbitrary manner, pointed the letters fo as to make the fame letters, which in every other passage found Berith, to be in these texts pronounced Borith.

Mal. 3. 2. The Angel of the covenant, of Berith, is faid to be like the refiner's fire, and like fuller's, Berith, fope, and comes to purge and to purify. And, Jer. 2. 22. Reproaching Israel for their wickedness and uncleannels, Jehovah faith, For though thou wash thee with nitre, and take thee much Berith sope, yet thine iniquity is marked before me.

THESE passages, evidently, shew that the word Berith has in it the notion of cleansing, purifying, and the root from which, in that fense, it must rife is Bar, Barar, which signifies pure, to purify; and the word Berith, formed from that root, may signify properly purification, a purifyer, a person or thing fit to purify.

KEEPING in view this notion of the word, and recollecting that every thing was, under the Law, even the most holy things, to be cleanfed, to be expiated, to be fanctifyed, by blood; that the pollutions of mankind were to be washed away by it; and that the blood, which thus cleanfed, was but typical only of the blood of the real pu-

purifyer, who, in the New Testament language, is to wash us in his blocd from all our iniquities: Who can help concluding, that the great facrifice to be cut off, in due time, was called Berith the purifyer, to fignify the end of shedding his blood; that the representative beasts, the types, were called by the fame name; that to flay, or cut off, Berith, or the beast representing Berith, the purifyer, being the very fign, or fymbol, of the great the original, covenant for the falvation of mankind, which was to be repeated for confirmation of folenin covenants amongst men; the term or expression of cutting off Berith, or the purifyer, came in process of time to fignify the act to which, amongst men, it was applied, the making a covenant; the word Berith retaining, nevertheless, its original fignification, and being to be taken in that fense, when the fcope of the text requires it stoud?

UNDERSTANDING the matter thus, many paffages, that otherwife are extremely obfcure, if at all fenfe, become clear and fignificant. If a. 42. 6. I Jehovah will give thee for a Berith, covenant, of the people, and for a light of the Gentiles. 49. 8. I Jehovah will give thee for a Berith, covenant, of the people to establish the earth. If what is translated covenant, were rendered, as it ought to be, purifyer, nothing could be more clear and comfortable than those texts.

UPON the fame principle the blood of Berith, the covenant, will fignify the blood of the purifyer, without excluding the notion of that blood being the feal, and fymbol, of the covenant.

AND, in like manner, in many passages where Jehovah, inflead of using the word, translated to make a covenant, uses other words which fignify, establishing, giving, placing, his Berith, covenant, to, or with, any one, the word Berith may more properly mean the purifyer, than the covenant.

Gen. 6. 18. When Jehovah acquaints Noah that he is to defiroy the earth, with all its inhabitants, he affures him, at the fame time, that he is to eftablish bis Berith with him, and his family. Now, if Berith be taken, in that place, for the purifyer, the promife amounts to this, that the great purifyer was to come of his Line, which happened accordingly.

IN the fame way, Gen. 17. 2. Jehovah fays to Abraham, I will give my Berith between thee and me. And v. 4. As for me, behold my Berith, covenant, is with thee. And, if by Berith, in those expressions, is meant the purifyer, then these are formal declarations that that the Meffiah was to come of Abraham, which explains the other declarations, that in his feed all the families of the earth should be bleffed.

AND that declaration in which David fo much exults, in what is called his last words, 2 Sam. 23. 5. yet he hath placed with me an, or the, everlasting Berith; will fignify that Jehovab had decreed the purifyer, the Messiah, should spring out of his house, the' his house was not fo right with God as he could have wished it.

MANY more passages will appear in a very different light, from what they did formerly, upon taking the word in this fense, which may be the reason why the Jews, who mission the true Beritk, when he came in accomplishment of the Law, and the Prophets, have used much skill to hide the true meaning, which most undoubtedly was understood by their forefathers, after the death of Gideon, when Jud. 8.33. they went a whoring after Baalim, and made Baal Berith their God, to whom there was a house, or temple, at Shechem, chap. 9. under the title of El Berith, or the God Berith.

WHETHER the Ifraelites or the Canaanites built this temple is not material, the God was, furely, of the manufacture of Canaan, who fpoke the fame language with the Jews, and expected purification as well as they, tho' perhaps after a ftrange manner. Baal, or El, Berith, translated the Lord, or God, the covenant will hardly make fenfe; but the Lord, or God, the purifyer might be a proper object of worship for those who were fo fond of purification, as to cause their children to pass through the fire to purify them, and even to facrifice their children, by fire, to atone for crimes, and avert wrath.

HAVING faid fo much for explaining the Hebrew phrafe for making a covenant, it may not be improper to enquire a little into the origin of the Latin phrafe ferire, icere, percutere, fædus, which evidently is of the fame kindred.

WAVING the conjecture of the Grammarians that  $f \alpha dus$  might, in the old Tufcan language, have been used for h $\alpha dus$  a kid, which again might be the animal accustomed to be flain, or cut off at concluding treaties; because it neither appears that h $\alpha dus$  was antiently written  $f \alpha dus$ , nor that a kid was the regular facrifice: I think it most probable that  $f \alpha dus$ , in the phrase in question, meant originally what the adjective  $f \alpha dus$ , a, um, means, at this day, vile, abominable, polluted.

Now,

Now, it is certain that in the Hebrew language the facilitie gained it's name, from the end for which it was offered; a fin-offering is called, briefly, Sin; a trefpafs-offering, a Trefpafs; wherefore the vitim, brought for a fin-offering, is called, without any addition, a Sin. Hence a man is directed to bring his fin, if a creature, the type of that Perfon who was to fland in the place of the finner, to the door of the tabernacle, to lay his hand upon the head of his Sin; the Prieft is to kill the Sin, to pour out the blood of the Sin,  $\mathfrak{Sc}$ . without adding at all the word offering, to explain the meaning.

As, then, all religious rites flowed from the fame fource, and were inflituted in the fame language, it is very natural to conclude that, upon the formation of a new language, the expressions concerning those facred rites would be framed in some conformity to the original language. Now if, in the first language, that which was offered for fin, which was to atome for it, and to purge it away, was, by those who expected that effect from it, called fin, why may not we believe that what was offered to purge, what was termed fedity, pollution, absimination, might be called fædus, if fædus, in the language of the country, fignified fedity, pollution, uncleannefs?

AND, if it is allowed that fædus might fignify the creature offered to atone for fin, or uncleannefs, then ferire, percutere, fædus, would be the very att of offering for fin, and must come to fignify making a covenant, in the fame very way that cutting off, or flaying, Berith does.

To these observations, which tend to shew the antiquity, and authority, of Revelation, and the true end and meaning of the emblematical, and predictive instituttions, as well as of the terms in which the written will of God is conveyed, many more might be added; and these, already offered, might be supported by producing the passages from Authors facred, and prophane, by which they are to be vouched: But, as on the one hand, this would exceed the design of these fleets; fo, on the other, it would be but doing, over again, what is already infinitely better done by the ingenious Mr. HUTCHINSON, author of Moses's Principia, in that, and his other furprizing works, from whence all the thoughts concerning the antiquity of, and manner of interpreting Revelation are borrowed, and which are fraughted with discoveries, as useful as they are new.

This Author has been complained of for writing in a manner that has been called abstruse and dark, and, perhaps, with some reason; but, but, if he is not altogether to be acquitted from that charge, fure there is no excufe for those, who, pretending to admit Revelation as Divine, will not give themfelves the trouble to examine, with due attention, his Works, which make the Old Testament fpeak a language understood by our Saviour and his Apostles, and which hardly any body appears to have understood, fince their days. It is fearce possible to pay too dear, in labour, and study, for such discoveries; and, if regard for Revelation were out of the question, it is amazing that curiofity does not prevail with men of leifure, and learning, to look into books that are stored with for much entertainment in that way.

IF any unprejudiced perfon, acquainted with the Scriptures, who has looked into the antient heathen learning, fhall examine with tolerable care, those thoughts; it is to be hoped, he will find a ready answer to all the productions of modern, as well as antient, Infidels; and remain, to his great comfort, fatisfied, That Christianity is, indeed, very near as old as the Creation.
